You know your memories of this year: the spirit of the state championship game, the infatuation for the hot girl or guy in your class, the happiness of hanging out with your friends, the stress of your classes, the excitement of spirit weeks and for the seniors the exhilaration of Commencement. But there's more to those memories than pictures and captions. There are so many little stories behind the big one. That's where our stories come in. We have exposed the stories behind the championships, the relationships, the classes, and the finale. We have told individual stories about those who were involved, as well as the sport or club they were in. We have shone a light on the little stories of the people inside the action, and we have exposed Warren Central and the staff and students inside. So, yes, we still want you to feel sad about our losses and happy about our victories. We want you to laugh and cry; we want you to smile as you look at your friend's pictures and read the stories. But most of all we want the story of Warren Central, your story, to be . . .

ON OCTOBER 17 FOX 59 anchor Sarah Snow and the Fox morning team traveled to WCHS in the wee hours of the morning to feature the Warrior Varsity football team in a special Friday morning segment. Coach Wright, along with varsity team members and administrators, were chosen for interviews about the up coming game against Lawrence North.

A new natatorium and fieldhouse (below) were added to Warren Central along with the new Freshman Academy in the fall of 2003. Upon completion of the additions, Warren Central added more than 300,000 square feet, becoming one of the largest high schools in the Midwest.

"Huge"

Is the word freshman Megan Mattingly used when describing the Freshman Academy.

"I came from a small middle school," Mattingly said. "It was a hard transition at first just because how many people there are in this school. I never knew all these people could fit into one building. It was stressful the first couple of days, but I got used to it."

"Enormous."

Is the word she used to describe her class of 2007.

"I feel special because we are the first class to go through the Academy," Mattingly said. "The whole facility is just really nice, especially the classrooms because they are so open."

"Exposed."

Throughout this school year, Warren Central High School's new facilities were put to the test for the first time. The Indiana High School Athletic Association even held its Centennial Anniversary in the fieldhouse because they were so impressed with our new facilities.

The Freshman Academy opened this year with 40 classrooms, four computer labs and four teacher preparation areas. The addition of the academy helps freshmen experience a smoother transitional period into high school. The Vision 2005 building project focused on improving the high school's academic accommodations, as well as adding state-of-the-art athletic facilities to the campus.

A new Natatorium and Fieldhouse were added adjacent to the Academy. The Fieldhouse has three separate floors for competitions along with a three-lane running track on the upper deck. Each floor has an independent sound system and scoreboard. Along with the Fieldhouse, a new 8,000 square foot weight room, wrestling room and gymnastics room were completed. The Natatorium is equipped with an Olympic-sized competition pool, a diving pool and a therapy pool, all of which will be open to the community.

Not only were new buildings erected, but outdoor athletic facilities were also remodeled including the track, football stadium and softball diamonds. The entire addition to Warren Central is 330,000 square feet, making Warren Central High School one of the largest schools in the Midwest according to Mr. David Geise, Associate Superintendent for Business & Capital Development.

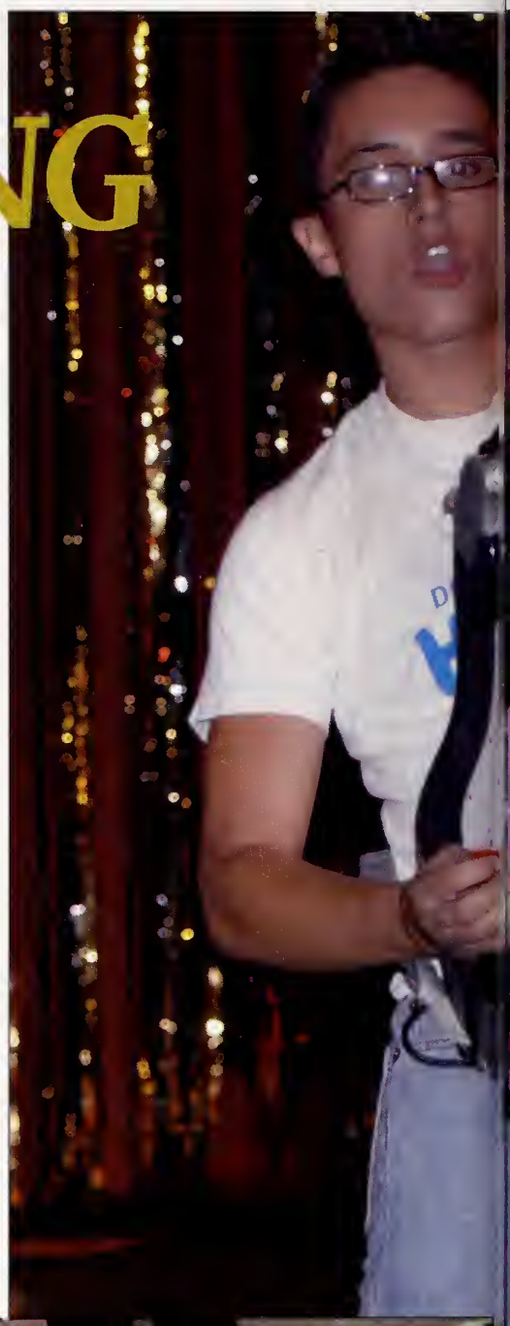
Hollywood HOMECOMING

Girls just wanna have fun; Lady Warriors show extreme school spirit.



"Hey guys, I am so excited about the Homecoming game on Friday. I've already made my shirt and bought some beads from the bookstore, but I wish there was something else we could do. This game is going to be awesome, I feel like we should go all out; like how the guys always paint their chests. Wait a minute, why don't we paint our stomachs?"

Amy Groll was talking to her girlfriends Krys Butcher and Lauren Downer about her idea for supporting the football team. Little did they know that it would spring a debate on just how far Lady Warriors could go to show their school spirit. As word got around about the plan, administrators questioned whether or not this exposed too much of the girls.

"I personally don't think that students need to show their stomachs at all whether male or female," Assistant Principal Mr. Roger Pittman said. " It could end up offending somebody."

Even fellow Warriors were hesitant about the plan. Classmates told them it was dumb and unacceptable.

"When our friends told us they did not want us to do it, we were very angry," Groll said. "We thought they would support us, maybe even join us, but certainly not be against us."

Despite all of the debating and disagreement, the girls went to the game and showed their Warrior Pride by sporting a big "WC" on their stomachs.

"I never imagined that trying to show some school spirit and support the team would cause such an upheaval, but when all is said and done, I would do it again in a heartbeat," Groll explained.

"I was very surprised, but also very excited that I won. It felt really good to know that people wanted me to win such an honor."

Exposing the game with COACH TUTSIE

You were in charge of the homecoming game all by yourself. How did that feel?

- Well, Coach Kevin Wright was at the game, so it wasn't just me, but it was nice to coach offense, because I'm usually only working with the defense.

Do you feel like you had a stronger connection with the guys when it was just you coaching?

- Not really, I pretty much know all of the players already and make it a point to have a good connection with them all of the time.

How was it different coaching without Wright?

- It was kind of scary coaching offense without him, but it was calming to know that he was at the game with me. I look up to Wright, and I liked seeing him there.

Did you feel like you were under a lot of pressure being the head coach?

- No, people who go to school in Iraq have more problems. I have to deal with wins and loses, they deal with if they come home alive or not.

How did you feel at the end of the game?

- I was very proud of our players. We all had a tough week with Wright's mom passing, it was a good win for us.

Foreign Exchange students lean on each other during their year overseas

"Lean on me, when you're not strong, and I'll be your friend, I'll help you carry on, for it won't be long, 'til I'm going to need somebody to lean on," said Bill Withers in his song "Lean on Me." That is just what three exchange students have done this year.

Kati Fischer, Megumi Kitabishi, and Aline Kornas all came to American in August 2003, since all the girls came at the same time they had an immediate bond form between them. "(Kati and Aline help me) because they can understand what I am thinking; they have the same experiences," said Japanese exchange student Megumi.

"It is great coming to American and knowing that I always have people to talk to who are in the same position," said German exchange student Aline.

Adjusting to the new family is one of the hardest things for all the girls. It can be very nerve-racking; not knowing the family you will live with till the day you arrive. The only way the girls could have talked to their new family is over the phone many once or twice, or send an e-mail or two.

When they arrived in America they had to hope they would get along with their new family; with your old family you have grown up together and know what to except from each other. Yet with the exchange progress the families have to go through the whole progress of getting to know one another again.

The bonds that the three girl exchange students have together can not be share with anyone else or change not be broken.

When the girls go back to their home countries, they all plan to keep in contact. Even though they may be living thousands of miles away, the bond of their friendshep will never break. "No one in America knows how it feels to be an exchange student. But we know how each other feels and what help each other needs," explained German exchange student Kati.

Finding time to WORK

Family-owned business helps students earn money

Many today's high school students have to find time to balance between school, sports, after-school job and many other extra-curricular activities that today's youth are involved in, but for brother and sister, Whitney and Nathaniel Miles, their story is a little different. They both work for their parents at their family-owned business, Best Coffee for Miles.

Senior Whitney is a B+ average student, a captain for the swim team, a member of Student Council and National Honor Society, an ambassador, and she is also a Cadet Teacher. With her busy schedule how is it that she is still able to find time to work? Well, lucky enough for Whitney, working for her parents comes in handy when trying to get your boss to understand your busy schedule.

"It's not extremely difficult to balance between working at the shop and dealing with school and swimming, but at times I feel I don't get to do the things I want to do for those extra-curricular activities because I have to be at the shop," Whitney said.

Granted Whitney only works anywhere from two to three days a week, but it is because she is so involved in other activities year-round and her parents understand that she can not work all of the time.

Sophomore Nathaniel is an A- average student who is also very involved in school with National Honor Society, Student Council and baseball. Working two to three days a week can be stressful for those who don't know how to handle it, but Nathaniel is able to look at the bright side that his parents make his schedule.

"I like that I am able to have flexibility when it comes to my schedule, especially during baseball season, but for the most part I don't find it to be that difficult to balance my time spent at school, sports, and work," Nathaniel said.

Though many students are obligated to their jobs these two don't feel that pressure because it's something that their family has talked about for years: owning their own business. But in the midst of the talk, their store opened in October of 2002. And to keep the family togetherness alive, Whitney and Nathaniel's uncle, Scott Pannike, an architect, designed the entire inside of the coffee shop. Not to mention their long time family friends Jim, Linda, senior Brady, and sophomore Jimmy Worrell form the Worrell Corporation lent a helping hand to print of their t-shirts and label-making needs.

The shop, for obvious reasons, is a very family oriented atmosphere. Not only does the Miles family work there, but they also share some of their duties with their 10 other employees equally.

Exposing the Job WITH BEN PRYOR

Senior Ben Pryor dishes out the scoop on being a lifeguard.

Cleaning the pool deck, checking the chemicals in the pool and teaching swim lessons are all a part of senior Ben Pryor's job at the YMCA. Those are not the only things he has to do. Ben also has to watch over the pool and one day may potentially be the one expected to save someone's life.

Although saving someone's life is not on Ben's list of things that he wants to do, he still has to pay close attention to the pool so that lives are not put in danger.

"It would be frightening to have to perform CPR on an unconscious victim," Ben said. "I have to give my full attention to the swimmers in the pool and the pool deck to ensure their safety."

Becoming a lifeguard is not easily done. Since it requires a lot of training to save someone's life, it requires a lot of commitment and time to become a lifeguard. In fact, in order for Ben to become a certified lifeguard, he had to be trained in CPR, First-Aid and lifeguarding skills in a class that lasted about one month.

"Lifeguarding doesn't pay enough to become a full-time career," Ben said. "However, it is a good after-school and summer job."

No work and all PLAY

Shows and practices fill all your free time when you're playing in a band

The lyrics from the song "Konstentine" by Something Corporate sum exactly how freshman Seth Austin Feels. The lyrics say, "I had these dreams that I learned to play guitar, maybe cross the country and become a rock star." Seth may not be ready to become a rock star just yet, but playing in his band Runner Up every chance he gets isn't holding him back from the dream.

Playing at various church events, the orchestra- sponsored "Play-a-thon" and winning Warren Central's first annual Battle of the Bands are just a few things Runner Up is known for. Seth plays the guitar and sings in his band on weekends and practices and plays with them in all of his free time.

Seth has been in the band Runner Up for about a year, but has been playing the guitar for two years. Other members of Runner Up include former Warren Central students Ric Bottoms who plays lead guitar and sings, and Jon Oldaker who plays the drums.

"I've known Jon for ten years and he is really good at the drums and has been playing for six years. We both love music and wanted to start a band," Seth said. "We needed more than two members in the band, so Jon asked Ric, a friend from school, to play with us and that's how we became a band. Ric then came up with the name Runner Up."

Even though they were all very experienced on their instruments, they still had to practice, which was what any free time was for. Weeknight and some weekends were spent practicing endlessly. Other weekends were spent playing shows and playing for their church youth group on Sunday nights.

Seth not only plays the guitar and sings, but also writes many of the band's songs.

"We don't play many covers of other songs because we don't want to sound just like other bands," Seth said, "I've been writing songs since I was 13 and I have written a lot, each song seems to get better than the last and our songs seem to have matured."

Love, girls, and life are among some of the things Seth writes about in his songs. The sense of humor of all the guys also adds flavor to their song writing and music.

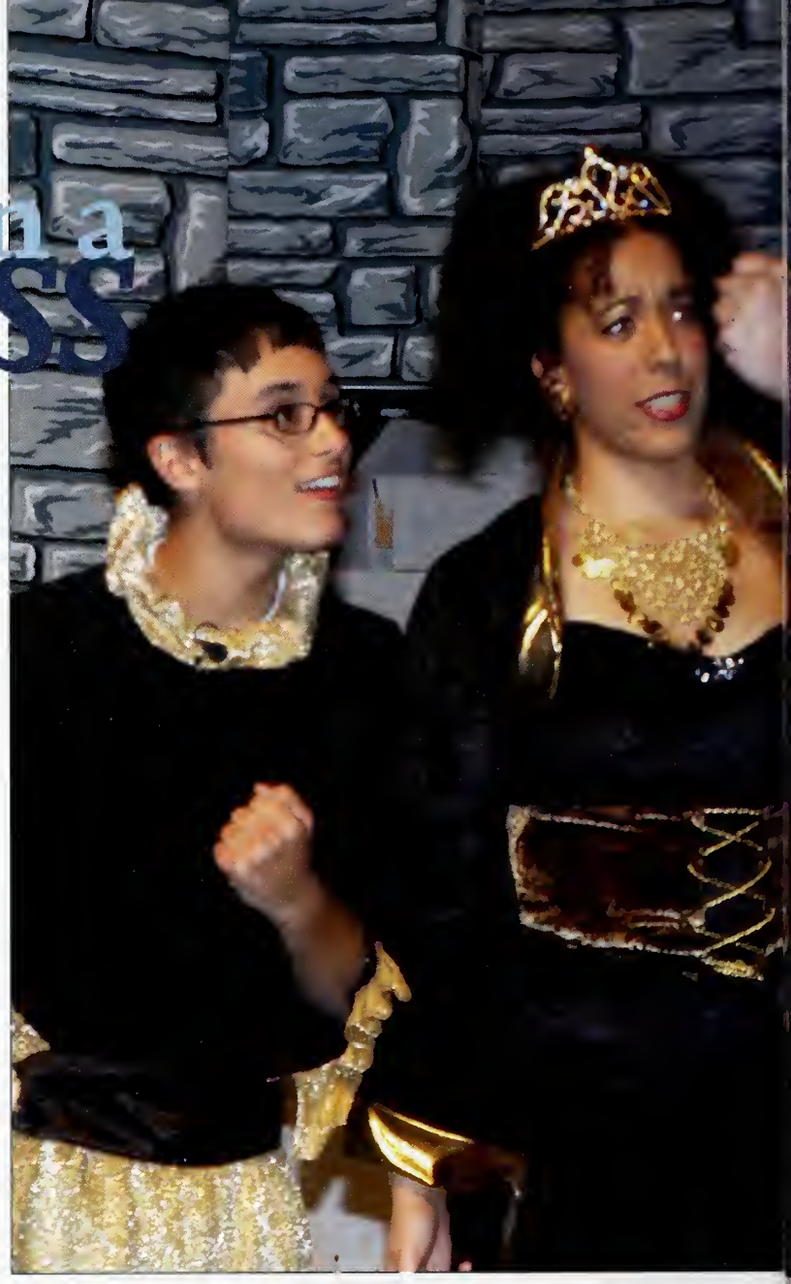
Once Upon a Mattress

Auditions make actors prove their stuff



"Once Upon a Mattress," a musical parody of the fairy tale "Princess and the Pea," was a hit with students, faculty and family this year, but more was put into the musical than two months of hard work. Close friendships were established during the musical among the cast, crew and directors. Cast and crew members worked together to assure that the curtain rose on opening night.

Auditions were the first step to making the musical a living dream. Instead of the traditional call out of two one-day auditions, one two-day audition was held, attracting almost 100 hopefuls who flocked to the Studio Theatre to learn dances and songs for the following day.

"I felt really nervous, and most definitely like I was going to be sick," said Duke Hee Yi, a chorus member and a sophomore student.

Mr. Jon Colby, the assistant director and Coffee House drama teacher, mentioned how hard it was to choose the students the directors wanted in the roles. "There was a whole lot of talent," he said.

The cast results were posted and the people who made the cut were thrilled. Senior Sarah Williams' reaction at seeing her name on the list for one of the ladies-in-waiting was, "I have a name! I have a personality and a character, but mostly, I have a name!"

The acting, singing and dancing weren't as effortless as the cast and crew made it seem on the performance nights in late October. The cast stayed after school at least twice a week, and every day in the final three weeks leading up to opening night. Stage lights and hot clothing made dancing and singing a sweaty, tiring exercise to endure every afternoon.

With the help of technical director Roland Black, the crew worked every afternoon to build the spectacular set that depicted the medieval kingdom in which "Once Upon a Mattress" took place.

In the end, everyone believed the two months spent was worth every minute. "At first I didn't feel it was well spent," Yi said, "but as time went on and we got further into the practices, all the dancing and singing was worth it all."

When the curtain finally rose, even the directors were impressed with what the musical had become. The final pre-performance warm-up brought tears to many members' eyes and hugs all around.

"I loved being part of the cast and being part of such a great musical. Even if my role was minor, I enjoyed every minute of it," Williams said.

SIZE Doesn't Matter

It Doesn't take a large cast to create an unforgettable play.

Compared to other fine arts productions, "Rumors" had a very small working group of only ten cast members. But that was one of the best parts of the play.

"This play in particular, with such a small cast that spend almost every day together," said junior James Victery, who played Lenny Ganz. "We had much closer bonds and friendships by the time it was over."

Some of the other actors enjoyed the small cast for its benefits as well as its intimacy. "We had a lot more dressing room space and more direct attention from the director," said sophomore Leslie Chaney, who played Officer Pudney.

The cast was committed to creating a hilarious performance. They met every day after school for two and a half months to prepare "Rumors" for its mid March opening. The actors even met together to practice on a Sunday.

"It was interesting to see how the other actors developed their own characters as time went on," Victery said. "You had to make your own character background along with theirs."

Making the right choices for character portrayal can be hard.

And "Rumors" was not without its difficulties. It was a challenge for the cast to work around two non-existent characters, the hosts of an anniversary party the characters attend. Senior Brian Coleman, who played Glen Cooper, said, "The host or hostess would come up in the dialogue and wasn't on stage, so it was hard to gesture when they were still in the home." But despite the challenges, the actors built on top of each other's work.

After countless hours of rehearsal and two astounding performances, "Rumors" ended with a bang. The cast and stage crew all helped tear down the set together, or "striked" as it is known. "I was very sad," Coleman said. "It was my last comedy to do in my high school career and my last chance to perform with some of the cast." Still the memories and the laughs will live on for "Rumors."

DEAD FROM a gunshot, Ken Gorman, played by senior Jonah Winston, crawls around the floor looking for a kitten that he hears. Guests from the anniversary party heard gunshots earlier in the evening and began trading rumors about their hosts.

DINNER GUESTS Lenny and Claire Ganz, juniors James Victery and Kristen English, are shocked to hear that their host of the evening shot himself through the earlobe. They help Ken Gorman, Jonah Winston, keep the gunshot a secret from the other guests.

RELATIONSHIP TROUBLES plague Glen and Cassie Cooper when they arrive for the party and cause a ruckus among dinner guests. They are the last to discover the truth behind the mysterious happenings during the party.

CHRIS GORMAN, played by sophomore Annie Thompson, keeps thinking up excuses to waylay the dinner guests from realizing the hosts of the evening are missing. She convinces television chef Cookie Cusak, senior Katie Hannigan, to cook dinner for the evening as a "surprise." Cookie, who had a bad back, gets assistance from her husband Ernie, a psychologist played by junior Nick Coffing. Accidents in the kitchen add to the confusion spreading through the dinner party.

Warrior HEAT WAVE

Lip Sync contest turns up the heat during Winterfest

On Wednesday, February 18 students filed into the PAC for the most anticipated show of the year. Stars from every grade came together for their biggest performance. At the end of the show, everyone agreed 2004 Lip Sync was more than anything anyone could have imagined.

But the show didn't begin there. It started in January when student Council officers Katie Collins and Mary Cho began planning the spectacular event. "We had a lot of work to do before the show even happened," said Cho, " such as designing the tickets and programs."

Katie, Mary, and the other student council officers also had to conquer the greatest challenge of all . . . picking the right acts.

To audition for the lip sync competition, students had to fill out an application and come up with a performance no longer than 10 minutes. The Student Council officers and advisors would then hold auditions after school in their office for two days. On the Friday of that week, the list of performers was posted.

"I knew we would make it. We were doing a Michael Jackson song!" said senior Sam Miles of the 2004 Lip Sync Champions "Squeal Mob."

Spring Break in Cancun

-Shamarla Jones

This Spring Break I had the opportunity to go to Cancun, Mexico, with my whole family. We stayed at the Cancun Palace right on the strip, so we could go anywhere we wanted easily.

There was a lot we could do in the resort area such as water bingo and other activities. Inside the hotel we could do anything from karaoke to getting massages. I was able to go parasailing. Flying over the ocean, looking down at the crystal water made me feel peaceful. I was a little scared seeing the swarms of stingrays swimming underneath me though.

Another thing that the whole family did was snorkel. Snorkeling was fun, but tough because the ocean current was strong. Just hanging on the beautiful beach was awesome itself.

The only thing that I didn't like was the shopping. I had to bargain with the vendors for good prices, it was annoying convincing people to give you a deal. Overall I had a blast hanging out with family in one of the hottest places in the world. What more could I ask for?

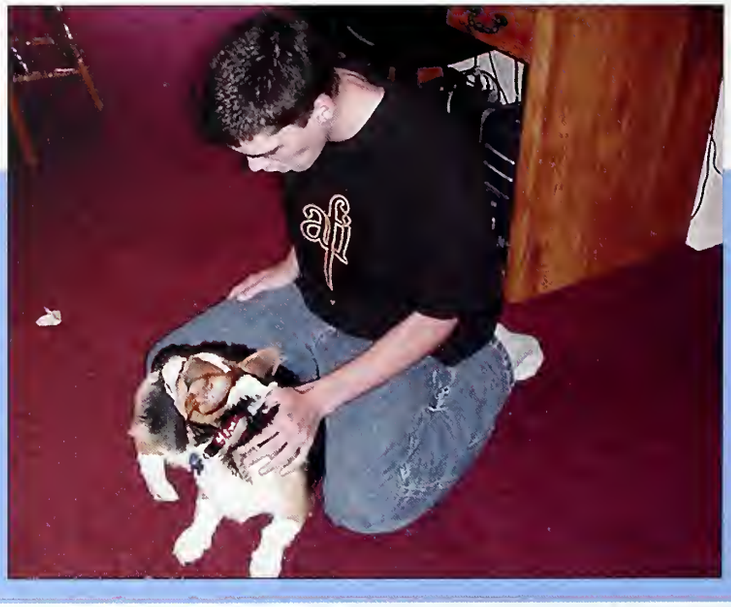
Work and Sleep: All I Need

-Justin Muncy

Spring Break. A time of year when everyone heads somewhere warm, somewhere that isn't Indiana. Somewhere it isn't snowing at the end of March; everyone except me, that is. When I saw it snowing outside, I thought to myself, "Why didn't I take the week off work and go somewhere warm?" But instead of going somewhere for Spring Break, I slept and worked.

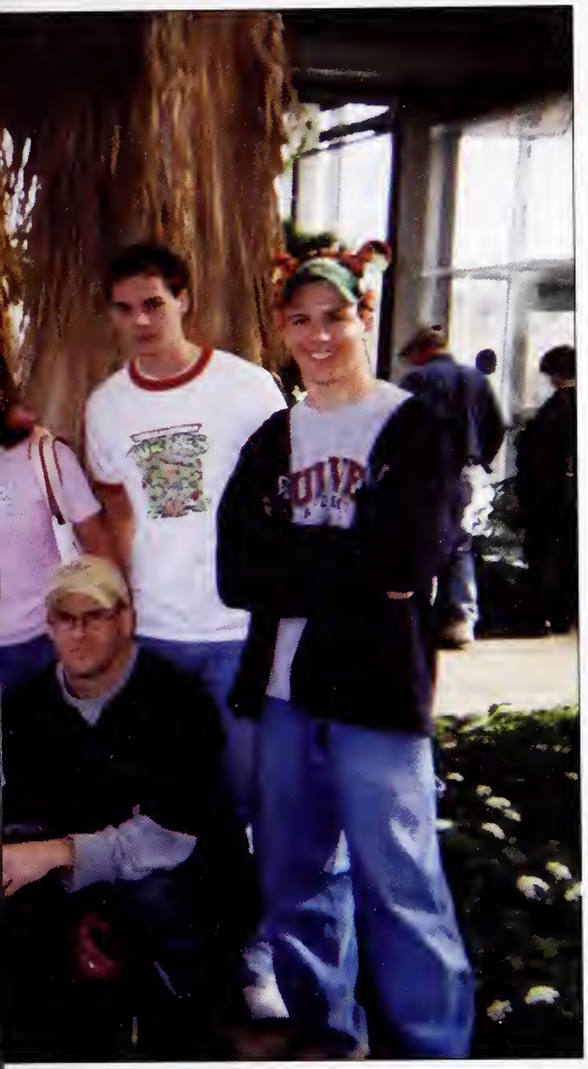
Maybe I didn't go to Cancun or Daytona or Tampa. Maybe I didn't get a nice tan, and maybe I didn't spend money I don't have. But in the long run, it worked out pretty well. I made money, and as stereotypical as it sounds, I didn't want to be out on a crowded beach. It just isn't worth the time.

Maybe next year I'll get away but I'm ok this time around. It's not supposed to snow in March, but that's all right. I had fun just the same.



Ashlee McCarty takes a minute out of her fun day at the Indianapolis Zoo to pose with her friends in the butterfly garden. The zoo was a hot place to visit for those who stayed in Indiana for spring break.

Staying at home during Spring Break didn't prove to be too difficult for Justin Muncy. He was able to pass the time working, sleeping and playing with his little dog.



Around New England

-Aaron Henry

Over Spring Break I visited Beacon Falls, Boston, New York and Chicago. I went to Connecticut first with Kristen and Kymmi Mount. It was a long trip, but I didn't mind because the scenery was beautiful. We arrived in the morning and later took a train to Boston. I was able to visit the Holocaust Memorial and the Boston Harbor. The best thing was getting to see the Cheers Bar; where the show was based. That night we took the train back to Connecticut.

The next morning we got on another train and took a longer trip to New York City. The train pulled into Grand Central Station, and I couldn't believe how big it was. We headed straight for Times Square. That night we saw the musical Rent. The following day we took a subway to Central Park then afterward headed back home.

On Thursday the choirs, Connection and Hi-Lites left for Chicago for the Showstoppers Competition. While there I went to the Sears Tower, the Navy Pier, and the Magnificent Mile. After that we headed home from our long choir weekend.

Good Ol' Indy

-Ashlee McCarty

I didn't go anywhere out of town for Spring Break this year, but I still had fun. I went to Greattimes, hung out with my friends, and went to the zoo.

I went to Greattimes one night with Jimmy Hodges and Courtney Roberts. We rode go-karts and played miniature golf. Courtney and I smoked Jimmy on the go-karts, but none of us were very good at the golfing!

The best part of my Spring Break was definitely the day I went to the zoo with a big group of friends- Lindsay Ward, Courtney Roberts, Ashley Seehase, Keary Weaver, Jimmy Hodges, Machy Magdalinos, Eric Cook, and Coach Mescall. We saw all of the animals, went to the dolphin show, saw the butterflies in the garden area, and went on the roller coaster. There is a new seahorse exhibit so we got to see that. For lunch we had planned on having a picnic, so we packed a bunch of stuff, but in the end it turned out to be a "tailgating party at the zoo."

So even though I didn't go anywhere out of town for Spring Break, I still had loads of fun!

While in Boston Aaron Henry poses with the historical t.v. land mark where everyone knows his name. During Spring Break Aaron was able to visit many historical places.

One Last HURRAH

Senior Week gives Seniors a chance to say goodbye

In May 2001, the class of 2004 watched as the senior class participated in all of the senior week activities. "It was awesome to see all those guys that I looked up to act like fools," explained Bryan Engh, " I could not imagine doing the things they did, and now I wouldn't pass up the opportunity to do it all over again."

On Monday and Tuesday seniors were given the opportunity to show off their talents both musically, dramatically, and athletically. Senior Finales, which were held on Monday night in the PAC, had over 15 acts mostly of musical talent. On Tuesday, Senior Olympics were held on the football field with over 10 teams of 8 seniors each competing in silly races all night long. On Wednesday and Thursday, seniors were given opportunities everyday to just spend time together at the skating party and breakfast.

Finally it all came to an end on Friday afternoon. Seniors entered the South Gym at 11 a.m. to have lunch, get a sneak peak of the senior video, and give Mr. Burchett their gift to him.

Now as our last day at Warren Central rolls around seniors remember that first day freshmen year. We all woke up waiting for the last day of our senior year. But as the class of 2004 found out the week of May 9th, that day comes much too fast. By May 21, we will no longer attend Warren Central, but in our hearts we will always be legendary Warriors.

ON FRIDAY, MAY 14, seniors were honored at a luncheon in the South Gym. They were served lunch, got a sneak peak at the senior video, and gave Mr. Burchett his gift from the senior class.

"If I could go back, I would want to know how fast the year goes by. I would have lived every moment to the fullest."

Rising to the Top

Senior Taryn Quattrochi proves her intelligence

"My father always loved cars. In high school, he planned on being a mechanic, and did not care about his classes. He is a mechanic, and I respect him so much, but he is not happy, and regrets not working harder in school," revealed Valedictorian Taryn Quattrochi. "You need to work hard to keep your options open."

During her four years at Warren, Taryn's dedication to both extra-curricular activities and academics taught her essential life skills and valuable lessons about herself. While she expanded her mind in the classroom, Taryn learned the value and rewards of hard work through volleyball, softball, and basketball. She also learned the power of competition through Brain Game and obtained the skills necessary to run a business through NHS office.

"It [the skills] will give me the flexibility to choose a career I love and maintain the ability to adapt to new careers," Taryn said.

One of Warren's primary goals is aiding students in both their academic and social development; in fact, Warren's mission statement says, "The mission of MSD Warren Township is to serve the community by preparing all learners to become responsible and productive members of a multi-cultural and diverse society through excellence in education and a cooperative community effort."

That dedication to providing students with numerous academic challenges and opportunities forced Taryn, as well as other students, to grow up and think, not only about the curriculum, but also about life and the future.

Warren's dedication to academic superiority and Taryn's hard work provide the bases for a bright future. She has already received recognition as a National Merit Commended student, an AP Scholar and was commended on her outstanding academic achievement by Phi Beta Kappa.

As Taryn wraps up her senior year and prepares for a new academic adventure at Washington University in St. Louis, she is also immersed in her Valedictorian duties, such as writing a commencement speech. Taryn will deliver her speech in front of the hundreds of proud students and parents packed into Conseco Fieldhouse for Graduation. And as commencement ceremonies end, Taryn and the other graduating seniors will leave the building not only proud of their academic accomplishments, but also ready for the adventure ahead.

Hi-tech LEARNING

Palm personal computers allow for a paperless classroom

MR. RICK REED shows junior Matt Dailey how to operate his Palm Pilot. As part of the Lilly Endowment Grant, selected classes implemented the handheld computers into their curriculum.

"The Palms not only save a lot of paper, they provide each student with a small, compact computer that is accessible 24 hours a day and during every class."
-Heather Davis

As Mr. Rick Reed quickly scribbles the proper works citation procedures across the board and stresses the importance of following them precisely, his 11 AP English students copy down every example and every recommendation. However, rather than simply writing her notes in a raggedy, worn-out spiral notebook, Heather Davis sits hunched over her desk punching each word into her Palm personal computer.

In 2001, Warren Township, along with six other townships in the Indianapolis area, received grants from the Lilly Endowment to better student achievement. Teachers in the area wrote proposals for a chance to receive money from the Lilly Endowment. Six classes from both the middle school and high school received $75,000 of the $4.5 million grant.

English department head Mr. Reed was one of the teachers who received a portion of the grant. Two weeks after spring break, his 44 AP English students were given a Palm to use inside the classroom. Students used the Palms to take notes and write research papers, as well as for quizzes and test preparation. Once completing the assignment, students could "beam" their work to their teacher. The ultimate goal of the program is to create a paperless school environment.

"The Palms not only save a lot of paper, they provide each student with a small, compact personal computer that is accessible during 24 hours a day and during every class," said Heather. "I can also photograph my assignments so that I don't have to carry a ton of heavy books back and forth to school every day."

However, these students' technological adventure will soon end because they will be forced to relinquish the Palms at the end of the year. And although the Palm program is currently receiving mixed reviews from both students and teachers, the handheld devices will continue to be distributed for as long as the grant provides.

Scholarly COMPETITION

ASMA competition offers students friendly competition, knowledge and self-confidence

SENIOR DOUG CARTER works diligently on one of the difficult ASMA questions. Students who accumulated enough points by the end of the competion received a medal for their accomplishment.

"When they're really hard [and I get an answer right], I want to jump up and down, but I don't because I don't want to disturb the others."
- Acacia Wood

The second Thursday of every month an elite group of Warriors enter H112 ready for a 35-minute battle against the clock.

Armed only with a sharpened number two pencil, scratch paper and a TI-83 Plus, these Warriors race against the clock to complete a seven-question test known to competitors as ASMA (the American Scholastic Mathematics Association test) designed to challenge even the brightest of mathematicians.

"Some rounds are more difficult than others; the problems are very challenging. It takes a special interest in math problem solving [and] a commitiment by the student to continue. We average about 40 students a round," says ASMA test administrator Mr. Gorball.

The ambition and commitment of these competitors is evident. The sounds of rapidly racing pencils scribbling across stacks of over-used white paper and worn-out erasers rubbing away mistakes at the speed of lightening are the only sounds heard throughout the room. The fortitude and concentration of these Warriors is obvious; they are determined to answer at least one of the seven difficult questions.

"When they're really hard [and I get an answer right], I want to jump up and down, but I don't becasue I don't want to disturb the others," said senior Acacia Wood, a four-year participant.

Veterans of this competition have learned that the test isn't always easy and a lot of the time the battle isn't very fun, but in order to up the odds and increase the excitement, these Warriors have started another more-friendly battle with their fellow ASMA participants.

"She is one of my good friends, [but] I want to beat Taryn [Quattroochi] just once," remarked Acacia when asked about the peer-to-peer battles.

And after what seems like only the blink of an eye, the Warriors look at the clock in disbelief. The battle is finally over and against all odds; they've won. The students, although they may not have answered every question or even any question correctly, have undoubtedly conquered not only the test but also the battle against themselves, the battle against knowledge, and the challenge of uncertainty.

Hands-on EXPERIENCE

> "Lab experiences help students understand science concepts and principles because they have a multi-sensory experience in a lab setting."
> -Mr. Bynum

As the the last bell sounds signaling the beginning of the period, an unusual silence falls over Mr. Bynum's accelerated Chemistry class. For some reason, the students are unusually attentive to the day's lecture; in fact, several students are furiously scribbling down notes in their raggedy, worn-out notebooks and all are hanging onto his every word.

About ten minutes into the lecture, the students grow anxious and the excitement in the room begins to build until finally, after what seems like an eternity, the lecture ends and they are released into their first lab situation of the semester.

Both students and teachers understand the importance of the hands-on lab experience. A lab provides students with an opportuniy to learn more than just the basic science concepts read in the textbook; it teaches them the importance of properly sequencing events, making accurate measurments, making detailed observations and correctly interpreting the outcome. This type of combined learning places students on a higher level of thinking and problem solving that is beneficial in all areas of life.

"Lab experiences help students understand science concepts and principles because they have a mulit-sensory experience in a lab setting. They work with other students, so the collabortaion effect has an impact on the learning. Lab experiences allow students to construct their own learning," Mr. Bynum said.

"The difficulties and time commitment of creating a successful and beneficial lab are often overloooked. Teachers must dedicate a great deal of time to producing a lab because not only must they teach the original lesson, they must also create a time schedule for the experiment, gather the needed materials, and compose solutions to the problem. Fortunately, however, many teachers like Mr. Bynum feel in the end, the payoff is worth the extra effort.

With only five minutes left in the class period, students rush to record the last of their observations and slowly, one-by-one, begin to replace the microscopes and slides back into their proper locations. The sounds of the microscopes scooting across rubbery lab tables is only masked by the discussions of proud Chemistry students, who have not only gained a knew knowledge that spans far beyond the science wing, but have also successfully completed their first lab experience.

-Orion Strator

The gavel rapped the stand while the moderator cried, "Decorum delegates."

Senior Gabe Thayer slid back in his chair studying his committee notes and preparing his next speech. Although he was sitting in a conference room in the Paris Hilton Hotel in Chicago, about a hundred other teenagers were surrounding him raising their placards to participate in a session of the UN's Economic and Social Council.

Twenty-two students from the International Relations class attended Model United Nations of University of Chicago February 5 through 8. While there, delegates went to committee meetings, debated and wrote resolution papers regarding topic areas such as, the "Return and Restitution of Cultural Property."

This year the students represented the Arab Republic of Egypt at the conference. Previous years the school represented the Czech Republic, Saudia Arabia and Mexico. Junior Orion Strater was the only loner in the session. He represented the Pakistani government in the International Labor Union.

"The sessions can be monotonous. Sometime you spend 40 minutes deciding which topic to address next," Strater said. "The arguments seem pointless."

Students started preparing two months before the conference. While at the conference, the students had to follow a rigorous schedule, many times they did not return to their hotel rooms until past midnight. Sessions generally ran five hours long.

However the hard work did have its pay offs.

Juniors Dustin Swensson and Tanya Van Skyock received acknowledgement for their superior participation in the League of Arab States.

Expanding Young MINDS

Foreign language teaching program teaches patience, dedication and organization

SOPHOMORE MELISSA OLSON teaches a small group of second graders German. The foreign language teachers visited their elementary schools once a week.

"Teaching is definitely a huge commitment; it took a lot of time to plan a year's worth of lessons and plenty of patience."
- Una Dragic

You all remember it, right? The good old days of elementary school, when your biggest worry was whether or not it would rain during recess, forcing you inside to create your own indoor adventure.

Elementary schoolers today, however, have much bigger problems: "Are the high schoolers still going to come today? Are you sure they'll be here?"

Mr. Greg Butler, second grade techer at Hawthorne Elementary, was one of the many teachers forced to listen to the concerns and worries of his students who fear the unthinkable will happen: the high school students traveling from Warren to teach them a foreign language will simply forget to come or-even worse- quit altogether.

The Warren Central participants in this program quickly learned that teaching wasn't all about fun and games; it involved a lot of hard work, understanding, and dedication.

In order to teach just one lesson, the students had to carefully plan every minute of their short 15 to 20 minute visits, from what to teach to how to teach it, and they often learned that teaching a room full of rambunctious elementray school kids is far from easy.

"Occasionally we [my group]have to find new and inventive ways of teaching the material so that the younger children are better able to understand it, but this only adds to the fun of teaching," said Una Dragic, a fourth year German student and Warrior teacher in Mr. Butler's second grade class.

And although these students invested a lot of time, dedication, and occasionally a lot of frustration into both their students and their lessons, they knew that all the extra hours and aggravations were well worth it because they had truly made a difference in the lives of a handful of students. Una was one of the many students who learned this lesson.

"Teaching is definitely a huge commitment; it took a lot of time to plan a year's worth of lessons and plenty of patience. I was often unsure if the fun in teaching was even worth all the aggravations it caused until the end of our numbers lesson when one little girl hugged me and quietly whispered in my ear 'I want to speak German like you one day. I want to take German when I'm in high school.'"

JUNIOR MELISSA WALKER carves out the center of her clay creation. Melissa advanced to Project XL's second round.

The second stage out of four is not too shabby when it comes to Project XL.

Authors, poets, artists, songwriters, filmmakers and performers from the Warren Arts Departments competed in the annual statewide Farm Bureau Project XL, which kicked off in early January. Students from the Fine Arts classes did particularly well in the contest, making it to the second round of judging.

"Project XL gives students an opportunity to gain experience in art competitions," according to Junior Jordan Adair, an Art department student.

Students created their pieces with the theme of "Change" in mind, and came up with a multitude of diverse pieces which they entered in their respective categories.

Senior Brent Aldrich's work was a 2-D piece with three masonite acrylics featuring three sections of an arm reaching up through three different backgrounds. The process of creating it was so trying that Aldrich, upon its completion, wanted to disown it rather than enter it.

"In retrospect, I really like it though. It was worth it to know that I had created something that won recognition and acceptance in a contest such as Project XL," Aldrich said.

Students entered six categories: 2-D art, 3-D art, video art, writing, original music and performance. The first round eliminations were announced March 5, second round eliminations were announced March 12, and state finalists were announced March 19. The Fine Arts students were pleased with how many of them made it to the second round in the 2-D and 3-D art categories.

"It looks pretty good when this many people from the Art department make it that far," Aldrich said.

Adair also entered in the 2-D category, and his piece also featured hands to symbolize the theme of change. Jordan's piece was one of the entries from Warren to make it to the second round, and he is proud of his work.

"Contests like this show how many people are really committed to their work," Adair said.

Warrior FIELDHOUSE

New fieldhouse provides students and teachers with more space and better equipment

WARRIOR GYM STUDENTS stretch on the fieldhouse floor before beginning the day's activity. The fieldhouse provided students with more space to spread out during warm-ups.

"There is plenty of space ... anything you want you can do. It [the fieldhouse] eliminates the problem of over crowdedness."
-Mr. Ledbetter

When someone walks into the new gym, many thoughts come in their mind, such as 'big', 'wow', 'nice', or 'gigantic'. This is something the old gym never did; the field house has more than 450,000 sq. feet while the old gym has only 12,000 sq. feet.

"The size gives everyone the ability to try new things," said Machy Magdalnos sophomore athletic weights student. "We have tons of basketball courts, an indoor track, which helps everyone, and a brand new weight room."

There are many advantages that the new fieldhouse has to offer; yet the best is its size. "There is plenty of space...anything you want you can do," said gym teacher Mr. Ledbetter. "It [the field house] eliminates the problem of over crowdedness."

The other advantages include the design, which helps give the ability for more than just one P.E. class to work out at the same time. In addition, the floor coincides to the P.E. classes and other sports teams. There are also plenty of scoreboards, which help students participate in more activities than one, and a great sound system that facilitates to all the activities that go on at the fieldhouse, says Mr. Ledbetter.

The new fieldhouse does not only include the gym, but it also consists of a gymnastics room, a weight room and a wrestling room. The gymnastics and wrestling rooms are off limits to students during P.E. class, but the weight room can be used during designated times.

"I like the weight room a lot, it's really nice," said freshman P.E. student Bernadette Wahlen.

The fieldhouse was one of the many changes made to Warren Central this year. For many people it is a great opportunity to be able to use or teach in it.

"The new field house is like a dream come true to me. I never imagined being able to use and teach in such a wonderful facility," said Mr. Ledbetter.

"I made two baskets," Jacob declares, while talking to his friend and teammate Randy during first period. "We beat the other team good," Randy adds. It's the day after the big basketball game in Mrs. Peggy Fitzgerald's class of students with moderate disabilities. The 12 students are scattered around the room stuffing newspapers and leaving on schedule to deliver them to their designated classrooms.

There are 27 kids in the moderately disabled program at Warren Central High School. Mrs. Fitzgerald and Ms. Dena Condra split the students to make two classes. Each year, they attend Prom and many are involved in Student Council and Best Buddies.

After delivering his papers, Randy gets his red folder out to complete his morning work. He sits at his table labeled "Randy's Musical Corner." Across the room, Niesha complains, "My mom woke me up at 6 a.m. I was so tired." Randy laughs, while Niesha starts humming the tune to a song WCTV played over the morning announcements.

Students take Community Based Instruction (CBI) trips to help them get prepared for life outside of school. They travel to Uncle Bill's Pet Store, the bank and the retirement home along with many other places. In the back of the classroom, there is a refrigerator, microwave and oven along with cabinets that can be used for storage. There is also a washer and dryer in the room.

They do laundry while learning how to use the washer and dryer, and they also work on folding clothes. Daily, they stuff and distribute the "Indianapolis Star" to several classrooms.

Students who are moderately disabled may stay in school up until they are 21. This makes the bond between teacher and student considerably stronger, which makes Mrs. Fitzgerald's job even more emotional.

Jacob is a junior this year. Next year, he constantly reminds everyone, he will graduate. Mrs. Fitzgerald beams at him and says, "I know Jacob." She looks away and whispers, "We will miss you, but for now I'm not going to think about it."

Cosmetology readies students for real world beauty salons, offers credit for beauty schools

AS EASY AS it may seem, junior Azsa Hunt concentrates extra hard to perfect the act of curling her manikin's hair. During this class students experienced first hand what it was like to work in a salon.

"I was leaning forward on a chair at the shampoo bowl when the chair fell back and I fell into the shampoo bowl."
-Jessica Gambrel

Class started and the radio was blaring as students were scattered about the salon-style classroom. Jessica Gambrel and Kiyanna Gurnell were styling each other's hair and working on their nails. But they didn't get in trouble for doing it during class time because they were in cosmetology class.

Cosmetology teacher Ms. Lisa Firestone taught her students not only to do hair and nails, but also about the fundamentals of anatomy, physiology, chemistry, microbiology and trichology. Gambrel and Gurnell were having fun and making careers for themselves at the same time.

"I joined cosmetology because when I was young one of my dad's friends, Mrs. Cline, showed me around her salon and I have enjoyed working with hair and nails ever since," Gambrel said.

Since this was the first year the class was offered, all the students who took it were basically guinea pigs. "It took a lot of research, patience, and hard work to get this class offered in the Walker Career Center," Firestone said, "We turned about half of our applicants for this class away."

The selected girls were dedicated, passionate and hardworking. "I have an interest in doing hair and this class is a great chance to pursue it. We do it a lot, but I am doing something I enjoy," Gurnell stated.

Although a lot of work is done, the girls have fun too. "When we were learning to use the sinks, everyone soaked themselves at least once, it was funny," Gurnell said.

"I was leaning forward on a chair at the shampoo bowl when the chair fell back and I fell back into the shampoo bowl," Gambrel said. The girls can now tell future members to listen when learning to use the equipment so the same thing doesn't happen to them. They can also tell the future members to be careful in what they do since they were the first to experience these things.

Juniors Matt Dailey and Jason Delay walked calmly out of the kitchen focusing on not dropping the tray full of food. The food didn't belong to either Dailey or Delay but the large group of people who sat waiting in the Threshold.

The Threshold, located in the Walker Career Center, is cooking up something of its own. The Threshold is Warren Central's own restaurant, open since 1976, run by juniors or seniors who have taken a Nutrition and Wellness class.

"I wanted to join this class because it's an excellent experience to learn about running and working in a restaurant," Dailey said.

This year was a learning experience for Dailey and other first year students. They were taught management skills as well as how to work with people. Each day students have opportunities to work with different things. They rotate positions working as a server, host and cook.

"Monday and Fridays we do preparation work for when we are open. On Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays we are open to the public and most of the time we are really busy," Dailey stated.

"I switch jobs every two weeks, but it's okay because this class is fun and so are the people I work with," Delay said.

Although the students need to have a lot of discipline and patience with this being a real restaurant, the students still have a lot of fun.

"My favorite part of this class was meeting new people. [Cardboard, Darby Cake and Tee] are my friends that I have given nicknames," Dailey said.

Along with getting work done this was a great opportunity to meet friends with similar interests.

"The funniest part of this class was the day I licked the freezer door and got my tongue stuck," Delay said. "It happened at the beginning of the year though, so I can't get in trouble."

Helping Others

Junior Sarah Bocik excels in community service

"Every Wednesday after school, I work with Chi Alpha Psi, a youth outreach in the inner-city. One night, after the program was over, we were taking our route home on the bus. One of the girls came and sat next to me, very quietly for a while, and then proceeded to share with me her struggle with domestic abuse," junior Sarah Bocik revealed.

"She told me she had been struggling to find a place to live because no one in her family was able to care for her. As she sobbed on my shoulder, I truly believed I had nothing to give- but all she wanted was what I'd been giving her all along- love and compassion. That's what community service and volunteering are all about."

Sarah, like many Warren students, dedicated much of her free time to helping those around her and her community; she donated every Wednesday after school and nine hours every Saturday to various volunteer organizations. At first, Sarah admitted, she was a little reluctant to commit so much time and energy into the community and those in need; however, she soon realized that it gave her a new and refreshing perspective on life's true values and a real passion for life. "It [volunteering] forces you to evaluate your priorities, and often, redefine what you do and who you are," Sarah said.

Many Warren organizations, such as the National Honor Society and Student Council, were dedicated to introducing their members to the value and importance of community involvement and helping others. In fact, these groups required members to complete numerous community service hours in order to remain active in the organization and provided students with the opportunity to work with numerous volunteering events and missions both in and outside of Warren Township. For example, both the NHS and Student Council promoted the second annual Will Power Walk/Run benefiting Riley Children's Hospital and the Special Olympics Polar Bear Plunge held at the Eagle Creek Reservoir.

"We [the NHS] hope that our members learn and benefit from every hour of community service they complete. Hopefully, completing community service and volunteer projects not only teaches members their unique and individual attributes, but also helps make the world a better place," said senior Albert Chaney, President of the National Honor Society.

Many students grew weary at the thought of completing 20 hours of community service in order to remain active in the NHS or dedicating five hours each semester to volunteering for Student Council. However, many students, like Sarah, continue to volunteer even after reaching their community service requirements.

"When you open yourself up to see the need, your sacrifice no longer seems so great. You may feel that you can not connect with certain groups, that you are not talented in any useful areas, or that you don't have anything to give, but you can do something. We all have a job to do- a role to play. Everyone can do something," Sarah said.

Service Defines Spirit

Student Council Christmas party once again brings joy.

The scene in the Commons is nothing short of pandemonium as children arrive for the annual Student Council Christmas Party.

Student Council Historian Michelle Sponsel is standing on a chair calling out names of kids. They are paired with Warren students who were selected from the class that sponsored them for the Christmas Party. And then off the children are whisked into the cafeteria for crafts and pizza.

Each year seventh period classes and clubs are asked to sponsor a child. The students raise money in order to buy their sponsored child Christmas presents. Most children are sponsored from the Shepherd Community Center, but students from Lowell, Hawthorne and Pleasant Run are in attendance. Each year, Student Council sponsors this event as one of its many community service activities.

The party ends with Santa Claus handing out bags of presents to the kids, so they can open their gifts with the students who purchased them. Seven-year-old Ryan struggles under the weight of his bag, which is almost as big as he is.

He begins to rip open his gifts crying out when he receives his Digimon cards. "This is just what I wanted."

Sophomore Fatima Andrews, along with freshman Justyn Rieger, helps Ryan put his new gloves on. Their night ends with the three of them posing for a picture with Ryan wearing all of his new clothes and grasping his Digimon cards beaming at the camera.

"So wonderful and so touching," Principal Tony Burchett says as he sits on a bench in the Commons looking on at the scene that is unfolding right before his eyes, "This is truly the Christmas spirit."

> "The event was very stressful to plan, but in the end it was all worth it."

Preparing To be leaders

NHS inspires leaders to work hard helping others.

Students are rushing out the doors headed home while sophomore Laura Nash starts towards the cafeteria to help tutor students for National Honor Society. She does it not just to help other students, but because she knows it is part of her requirements for NHS.

Students with an grade point average of 9.0 or better received a NHS induction packet about a month into the school year. The returned packet was reviewed by a faculty council who decided if the nominee qualified for NHS.

NHS helps Warren Central by tutoring, sponsoring different events for students such as raising money for senior scholarships, and supporting the community out of the school.

NHS keeps its members hard at work. Each member must obtain a certain amount of points of various categories, and maintain a 9.0 grade point average to maintain status as a NHS member.

The NHS is beneficial, not only to the school and community, but also to the inductee. "NHS will prepare me to better serve the community as I get older," Laura stated.

It will also reinforce skills to characteristics that are vital to the positive growth of young people."

"If you don't get any joy and satisfaction out of the working hard for the benefit of others, at least you'll have met and worked with a lot of great and smart people," Laura stated.

Officers Step it up

Students learn what it takes to become class officers.

With her heart racing and hands shaking, sophomore Amy Ferguson walks into the principal's office. It was early April 2003 and Amy was running for sophomore class office.

"I was very nervous. Not only did I have to interview with Mr. Burchett, but the current officers were also there," Amy explained.

In order to run for a class office, students had to fill out an application listing their school activities, outstanding qualities, and find 10 teachers and 10 students who supported their campaign. After turning in their application a few select students were asked to come in for an up-close and personal interview with Mr. Burchett and the current class officers.

"The worst part of the entire process was that the interview was only 50 percent of the vote," Amy said. " The last 50 percent was up to my class to decide. But because of [class] size I was not able to give my speech to them."

> "In the end everyone just had to do their best and step up to the position they were given."
> Beth Cedoz

Students were given ballots that listed all the nominees in their English classes. They were then asked to vote for who they thought deserved the appropriate position. At times the students voting had not heard of the students running because of the large school.

"It was very difficult for me to decide who to vote for," explained junior Antonio Campbell. " I was new to Warren Central at the time and did not know who many of the students were."

Despite the anxiety involved in running for a class office and the struggle in choosing the winners, all the officers agreed that it was well worth it. " In the end everyone just had to do their best and step up to the position they were given," exclaimed senior Beth Cedoz who finished the year as class president.

Traveling To Chicago

Hi-Lites and Connection dazzle Chicago.

Sitting in her room in the early morning at the Palmer House Hilton, senior Sadie Bennett applies her pink and purple eye shadow, fuchsia lipstick, and silver glitter, readying herself for the Hi-Lites performance at 11 that morning.

Thirty-four other girls also prepared themselves in a similar fashion, all ending up on the street level of the hotel in lines two by two, each clad in a purple shirt, a purple carwash skirt, a purple ballroom skirt on top, and a pair of white pants hung over their left arm.

The day before, the mixed show choir Connection performed its competition show. They sang, danced, and poured their hearts onto the Oriental Theatre Stage, but that night revealed that Connection placed sixth and only the top five make finals.

At the local competitions, however, Connection made finals at Dekalb, the first contest of the season, where they placed sixth. Connection went on to place 10th at DeKalb, sixth at Anderson Highland, and seventh at Lawrence Central. The Hi-Lites placed fifth at DeKalb, Pike and Center Grove, third at Anderson Highland, and sixth at Lawrence Central. When they traveled to Chicago to defend their national title, they ended up third overall in the girls' division.

Brigade Going for Gold

The Gold Brigade works harder and goes farther.

All drum major Adam McDaniel remembers is the rain. As the band took the field during halftime of the Warren Central vs. Center Grove Varsity football home game on October 3, the wind was blowing and the rain was pouring down. The Gold Brigade marched out to their starting positions, while drum majors Adam McDaniel and Amanda Snyder climbed to their platforms.

Discover.

"Throughout the whole season that was my favorite show," Adam said. "Because the entire band had to try so hard to brave the weather and play in the rain." Five seconds for a Concert F warm up, followed by each band member taking time for their own individual warm up, and the band, at the wave of Adam's baton, began playing the beginning notes to their 2003 competition show "Imagination."

> "This season has been incredible. I am glad I have been a part of it."
> Adam McDaniel

Dare.

The music from the marching band show was originally from Cirque du Soleil and was arranged by Assistant Band Director Mr. David Brooks. The show was more innovative from a visual perspective compared to shows done by Warren in the past. The band even had a professional choreographer from California come and help with the dance portions of the performance.

Dream.

The band participated in the 2004 Orange Bowl Junior Parade and the Orange Bowl Halftime Show in Miami, Florida. It took $250,000 and quite a bit of fundraising to get the band to Florida. Band Boosters coordinated a Community Day and various other fundraisers for the Gold Brigade.

Believe.

The Band earned a second place overall and a first in music and marching for the Orange Bowl Junior Parade. The band also earned several awards during the season, including a third place at Mid-State Marching Band Competition held at Indiana State University. Throughout the season, the marching band dared to dream, which was the overall theme for their season, "Imagination: Discover, Dare, Dream, Believe."

Bigger Than State

Winterguard finishes 10th at Internationals.

Junior Jessica Guldner would describe the Winterguard season as unreal.

"It was awesome," Jessica said. "Winning built up our confidence and led us to do better every week."

Continual improvement and polishing is what made the Winterguard successful this season. Not only did they go undefeated during their regular competition season, they also won State and placed 10th at Winterguard International in San Diego.

"Our hardest competition in the regular season was probably the Mid-East Power Regionals held in Dayton, Ohio. Our 'Winterguard rival' were there, but we beat them in the end."

The Winterguard learned they would be competing in Winterguard International last year. "The event coordinators tell us a plenty ahead of time," Jessica said, " so we can have enough time to raise money, get permission from our schools and make plans."

> "Winning built up our confidence and led us to better every week."

In San Diego, the guard competed in two preliminary rounds then World Finals.

"This show was special because it was different," Jessica said about their competition show. "Nobody has done a show like it before. It had a lot of different styles of music, so each girl had a favorite part that showed off her individual personality."

According to Jessica, the experience of this year really builds up pride. Teammates learn how to manage their time better. "Since I have been in Winterguard I better manage my time," Jessica said. "My grades went up."

For Jessica the success of this year's season will generate into the next.

"I'm excited for next year's season. Warren's Winterguard is known around the country now. We have built up a name for ourselves. People are looking forward to seeing us again, and we're ready to show them what Warren is about."

Stepping Up to first

Sophomore takes charge as first chair viola.

Tiffany Camhi was a sophomore during the 2003- 2004 school year. She sat first chair viola in Symphony Orchestra, Warren Central's top orchestra. Tiffany has been playing viola since she was in fifth grade and she has been taking private lessons for four years.

This may not sound that impressive to some, but Tiffany was competing against the best viola players in Warren Central, including other sophomores, juniors and seniors. Tiffany also sat second chair for the better part of her freshman year, after declining first because she didn't feel up to the leadership role.

Tiffany has been highly involved in the orchestra this year. Not only did she step up considerably to be one of the leaders of the orchestra like she knew she could be, but she worked with her fellow violists to help make one of the better viola sections the symphony orchestra has had in years.

Tiffany was also a dedicated and active member of the Orchestra Council. She was one of the Publicity Coordinators. She worked hard this year, along with several other members of the council, to put together the Play-A-Thon, a newly established annual fundraiser for the orchestras,. This was only the second year for the Play-A-Thon, and Tiffany felt that it went very well.

> "I think working with my friends to make music is fun."
> Tiffany Camhi

Tiffany was not only involved heavily in Warren's Symphony Orchestra, but she also played in the New World Youth Symphony Orchestra, a special orchestra in Indianapolis consisting solely of Indiana's top youth instrumentalists. "New World is great. I've made a lot of new friends through New World," Tiffany commented.

Tiffany performed well in the orchestra not only on her instrument, but also with her peers. She worked hard, played hard and practiced hard, but she also loves the times when she gets to just sit and talk with her friends from orchestra. "Camaraderie is a very important aspect of any orchestra, along with being able to play an instrument," said Mr. Jefri Payne, Orchestra Teacher, and Tiffany fits into that profile.

"I think orchestra is fun," said Tiffany. "I think working with my friends to make music is fun."

LUTHER ROBINSON studies his bass music during class for the Symphony's performance. Luther was a hard worker who showed great leadership.

MAGGIE BRANHAM dedicates her class time to perfecting her music for contest. The concert orchestra participated in the ISSMA contest.

Practice Makes perfect

Reader's Theater's Christmas show goes off without a hitch.

"Chocolate cakes and butter cakes and cakes with lots of spice, layer cakes and angel cakes I think are very nice, but when it comes to Christmas time can anyone dispute that when you bake a Christmas cake it really could be, surely should be, yes it would be, positively, absolutely must be made of fruit. Fruitcake!" recites a class full of Reader's Theater performers perfectly in sync with Mrs. Bravard's swinging left arm, which acts as the metronome that holds the group together.

These performers know first hand the importance of rehearsing every line and every choreographed movement of the program. In fact, they work nearly the entire first semester to perfect a handful of skits for one performance, their annual sellout Christmas extravaganza.

Rehearsals began within the first few weeks of school and the dedicated performers tediously scribbled in each word emphasis, each arm movement and every other important detail of the show. After all the little details were recognized, the classes began the really hard work, practicing each page of dialogue and each skit until it was performed flawlessly.

> "The only scary part is you're never quite sure if all the practicing will pay off until the performace."
> Brittney Cline

"Practicing for our performance really is a lot of hard work, but it's also a lot of fun. The only scary part is that you're never really quite sure if all the practicing will pay off until the performance," said Brittney Cline, sophomore and rookie member of the Reader's Theater program.

From the moment the performers stepped on stage, it was obvious the practice was well worth the time. Each skit was delivered with confidence, professionalism and enjoyment. And the performers knew the moment they walked off the stage that they left the audience with a performance they would never forget.

"Ya wan't some tasty taters?" senior Andrea Rose asks of Senior Vicky Jordan and Junior Jennifer Roberts playing country bumpkins during the veterans showcase. The sold out Readers Theater's Christmas show played for two consecutive nights, and let members display their talent to the community.

Dedicated Speech team

Speech team up bright and early to compete in events.

"Sisters are like cookies, they're sweet and they also have a 'weight' about them," recites Leslie Chaney and Maria Wilmont practicing for their Original Performance speech in the semi-finals.

Speech is often downplayed due to the fear of public speaking, but this is not a problem for the speech team because they participate in 14 different events that have to do with public speaking. Not only is there a large selection of events to chose from, it is easy to make new friends and there is a whole team for support.

Having to deal with all of the practices and meets, speech is about determination. On many Saturday mornings while most teenagers are still asleep in bed, the speech team is at school by 5 a.m. ready for the meet.

"Not being a morning person I had to be dedicated to what I was doing," admitted Maria. Waking up that early in the morning, warm-up activities are bonding activities and an easy way to stay refreshed, awake and focused.

> "Not being a morning person, I had to be dedicated in what I was doing."
> Maria Wilmont

Sometimes the speech team will have to be at school to travel to the opposing school at five in the morning and the speech team will not return back to school until 12 in the afternoon, so these warm-ups really help.

"Once again the Warren Speech Team met and beat my expectations due to their talent and hard work. It's always a challenge to top the previous year, but this year's third place finish at State did just that," Mr. Black said recapping this year's Speech Team's season.

Working Together

When the media gets together, great things happen.

She saw her father put a gun to her mother. She saw her father hit her mother. She saw her mother go down the street chasing her father with a gun.

She was only 12 years old.

"During a counseling session I attended, I was with a little girl no more than 12 years old," Angela Cain, community affairs director for WTHR and director of 2003 Shattering the Silence campaign, said. "That little girl spoke of the pain that was caused towards her. She asked 'I wonder why I have to go through this because I'm only a child?' " Because of the need to raise awareness on domestic abuse and to outline preventative measures, the "Owl" newspaper staff wrote an article on the subject and how it affects families and teenagers in their own relationships.

On the day the article came out, the WCTV staff aired hotline numbers of numerous centers and advocacy groups victims can call in order to get out of a dangerous situation. In order to enhance awareness on this topic, the "Owl" and WCTV banded together to further help victims of domestic abuse.

> "When people in the media get together to help someone in need, they can change that person's life."
> Chelsea Schneider

On January 16, members of the "Owl" were present at each lunch period so students could sign a poster stating "There is No Excuse for Domestic Abuse." Brochures detailing causes and symptoms typical of domestic abuse were handed out, and students also received purple commemorative ribbons to remember victims. That night representatives from the newspaper staff worked at a Lady Warrior's basketball game collecting products and monetary donations for the drive.

Also during the month of January and into early February, the "Owl" along with WCTV coordinated to raise over 2,000 products to help victims of domestic abuse. Each first period class was asked to bring in items such as shampoo, lotion, toothbrushes and soap, and the winners, Mr. Dennis McNulty's class, brought in over 560 items for the drive. They received a Chips and Salsa Party from Chi-Chi's, the official sponsor of the drive. On Thursday, February 12, members of the newspaper staff took the items down to the DVNGI.

Hope. That is why the "Owl" and WCTV took up the cause. Warren Central students can end the cycle by choosing never to become an abuser. They can shatter the silence.

Project Changes lives

Project Set receives $700 grant for Youth as a Resource.

"There's one person in this room who thinks you're great!" exclaimed Ms. Amy Moeller to senior Chrissy Robison. The girls were attending a grant hearing for the club Project SET.

Project SET goes to Warren Township elementaryschools once a month to do crafts and activities with the SACC kids. After looking at the supplies that would be needed to complete all of the activities, the officers and advisors saw they needed a lot more money. Therefore, they applied for the Youth As Resources Grant.

Youth As Resources is a program that gives local groups money for community service activities. "We had to be very organized in order to get money and the kids had to be very involved," explained Advisor Ms. Moeller, " As a matter of fact Heather Pallikan and two other students completed the entire application on their own as well as deciding what activities we would be doing and when for the entire year. The only thing I had to do was sign my name and show up for the interview."

> "The interview was very hard because there were things that we just didn't know."
> Chrissy Robison

After turning in their application the students and advisors had to attend an interview with the directors of Youth as Resources to prove just how organized they were.

"The interview was very hard because there were things that we just didn't know how to do yet or if they would even work out. Of course, those were the exact activities that they asked questions about," explained Chrissy.

After asking for over $2,000, the club received just over $700. "Although we did not get all of the money that we asked for, I do think that we will be able to fulfill our goals this year and change some of the children's lives," Ms. Moeller said proudly,

Pledge Pays off

"If you choose to booze, then you choose to lose."

On Thursday, April 22, 48 students were silent. Every year in the U.S., two percent of teens are killed on prom night because of drinking and driving. Two percent of the students at Warren equals 48, the number of those who statistically died.

"You might think two percent is not a lot," says Mr. Greenlee, "but think about it, 48 students at Warren, you're bound to know one of them."

Because of the efforts of Ms. Stacey Ego and Mr. John Greenlee, who have been the sponsors for Just Say No for three years, Warren did not follow those statistics.

In those three years they started the prom pledge. Students sign the pledge promising not to drink or use drugs and to keep their friends and family doing the same. This year nearly 200 students signed.

"In the three years I have been sponsoring Just Say No and have had students sign the pledge, there have been no accidents or deaths," Mr. Greenlee said. In years past, Just Say No has teamed up with Student Council to send a student dressed as the grim reaper through the halls of Warren as a constant reminder that death may be near if they choose to drink or use drugs.

There was no grim reaper this year but the message still came out just as strong with t-shirts sold township-wide displaying the message "If you choose to booze, you choose to lose." Also Just say No ribbons were distributed, Sarah Alejo made a special presentation on Wake up Warren on behalf of the Just Say No club, and of course, the prom pledge.

Students In training

Trainers work to keep teams, players on winning track.

Junior student trainer Seth Painter spent the night of Saturday, November 29 taping ankles, running the sidelines and dealing with the various injuries associated with the football team. Just as the football players received rings for winning the Class 5A Football Championship, so did the trainers for their contributions to the team.

"I thought it was a great experience and also a great opportunity to train in the RCA Dome and to learn more about my future profession. There is nothing more exciting than trying to tape an ankle between two plays when we are up by 50 points," Seth said of his experience at the dome.

Seth watched over the athletes from the two-a-days during the blistering summer heat until the final whistle blew at the RCA Dome. Whether it was playing the role of "waterboy," taping ankles or treating the dislocated shoulder of Mr. Football Desmond Tardy, he and the other student trainers devoted many hours to ensure that every athlete was at full strength and healthy enough to play each game.

> "There is nothing more exciting than trying to tape an ankle between two plays."
> Seth Painter

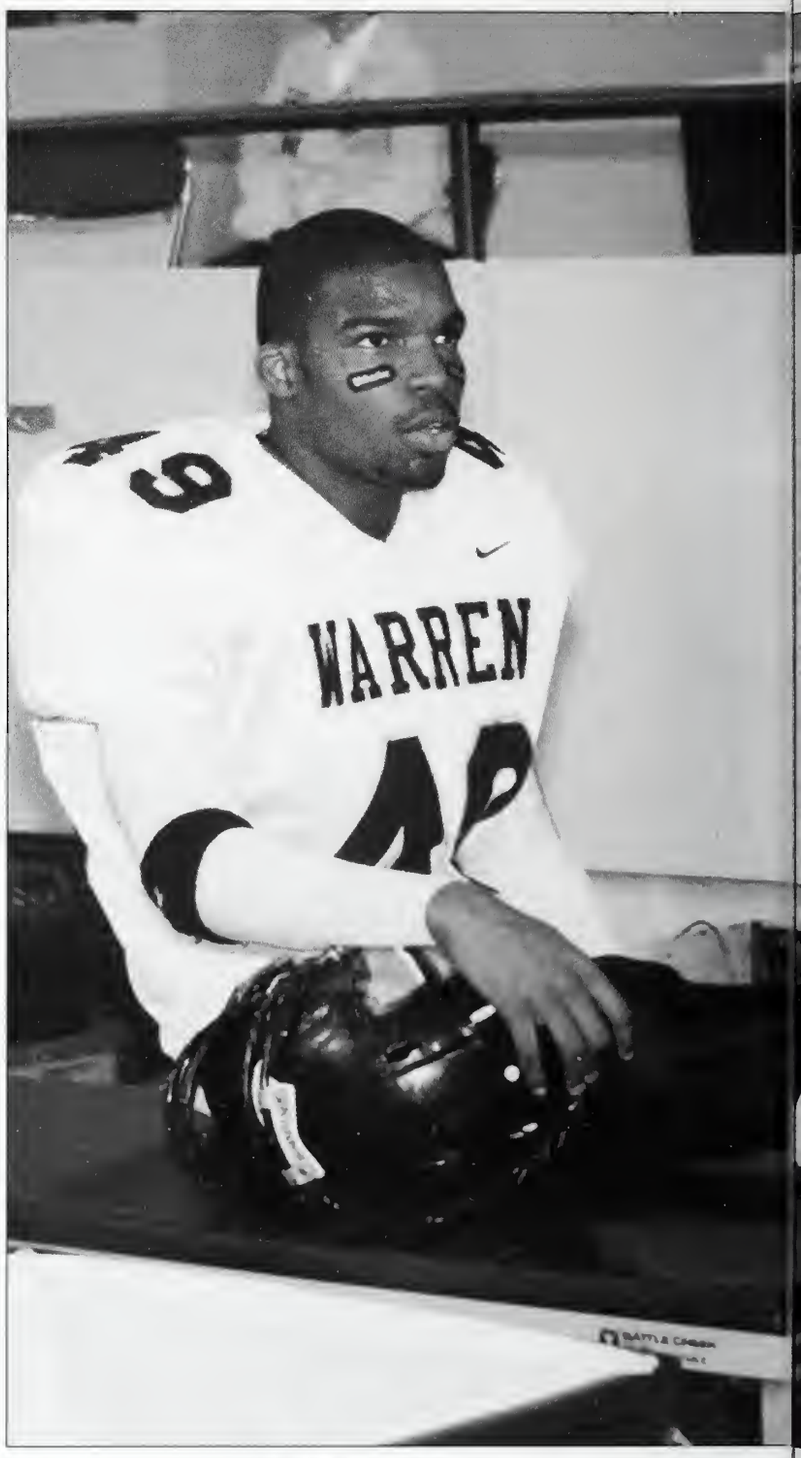
However, in order to become an athletic trainer, Seth was required to take the basic training course, which was taught by certified athletic trainer Mr. Dennis Dilts.

"Students are taught the fundamentals of athletic training such as injury prevention, immediate care and rehabilitation of athletic injuries. Then, they are graded upon the recall of information and a little on taping," Mr. Dilts stated.

Showing the importance of the trainers to the team, head football coach Kevin Wright said, "Student trainers were major players during our season and a big reason very few of our players missed time in practice or in games because of injury or illness."



Student athletic trainer Michael Crooke tapes senior Benny Baines' ankle during the state finals after Baines injured himself on the astro turf. Crooke was one of eight trainers to earn a varsity letter in fall sports.

Students Fitting in Foreign Exchange students fight to adapt and belong.

"Guten Tag," said foreign exchange student Aline Kornas, a senior from Schwerin, Germany, who is one of only four foreign exchange students who live with Warren families while they are here.

Going to school in a different country is difficult because it becomes a long term stay instead of a visit. The foreign students have to adapt to different habits, customs, rules, and of course school. "There are many differences between America and Germany like language, streets, and houses; however, the biggest difference to me is school," Aline said.

Aline lives with junior Michelle Swan. She said Michelle made it easier for her when she started school because Michelle could help her navigate around school.

"The food is the biggest struggle for me," Aline said. According to Aline Americans don't eat as healthy as most Germans, so she has to watch her weight. She also said that sports are not as popular in school in Germany. They only have soccer and volleyball. Aline admits that German schools have imitated some American things such as school dances and dress up weeks. Fast food is also becoming more popular.

> "To learn English and be accepted by Americans is what I strive for."
> Aline Kornas

"The thing that makes my journey here the most fun is just having the opportunity to be in a country of my choice," Aline said. To learn the English language, perfect it, and become accepted by Americans is what Aline strives for.

If she could take the whole experience and wrap it up physically, she would. But for now she has to live it up and pack the experiences in her memory.

Brain Game
Making it

Brain game makes semi-finals for first time in 8 years.

Just minutes before every tournament and every meet, a group of talented, confident and enthusiastic Warriors gather around their head coach and begin the final preparations for another tough competition.

They know the last few weeks of hard practices and the quick mental warm-ups on the bus trained them for this moment, but these last few minutes could give them the upper hand.

The team begins with a few simple exercises, left arm across and the side stretch, and ends with the more advanced toe-touch. And with their warm-up stretches complete, the Brain Game team is finally ready for competition.

The varsity Brain Game team was very successful this season. They finished their second undefeated regular season, thanks to both experience and teamwork, and secured a spot at nationals. The experienced and dedicated members also competed in the semi-finals for the first time in eight years.

"We have a successful team because of both experience and teamwork. Most of the varsity team is in its second or third season and we have learned to focus ourselves on a particular field of knowledge," junior Blake Harrison said.

As the four competing team members advance toward their chairs, they size up their opponents. They knew that every difficult question and every minute of each round would be important and the sweet taste of victory would come down to the final question. The team, however, is ready for the challenge; they had prepared and most importantly, stretched.

It's Alive

Robotics team brings their dream to life.

With the big yellow ball in hand, the Majestic Warrior moves towards the goal in its competition in Cleveland, Ohio. The Majestic Warrior is Warren Central's robot.

It took a lot of teamwork to get the robot to pick up the ball. It took about three months to plan and build it. There were six weeks of planning and six weeks of building.

The team split into four teams, drive, arm, frame and electronics. Each team was responsible for a certain task in building the robot.

After the 12 week process, the robot was ready to be tested. The team built part of the field the robot competes on. They practiced the lifting of the arms, which was fork lift. They tested to make sure the sensors on the front and back worked; the sensors told the robot where the walls were. The team tested the robot for about two weeks to makes sure nothing was going to fail when it came to competition time.

> "I have learned how to weld aluminum through robotics."

The team used three remote controls to instruct the robot on its next move. The remote control uses a "C" language to communicate with the robot.

When the time finally came, the team packed the robot up and headed to Cleveland for its first competition of the year. The team placed 28th out of 60.

Special Olympics basketball team makes 2nd in State Finals

Brian's favorite aspect of basketball is winning, "We sure did a lot of that this year."

That they did.

Warren Central has two Special Olympics basketball teams. The Black team coached by William Bumphus finished with a 7-1 record with four athletes and five helpers. The Gold team coached by Ryan Cannon finished with a 6-2 record with five helpers and five athletes.

Some special education students even get involved with leagues outside of the school. Jacob has played basketball throughout high school in one of those leagues. This year, his team finished first during the season, which meant he received a medal for his participation.

"My mom took my medal to work to show it to everyone," Jacob said. "I'm going to try even harder next year because it is my senior year."This he explains will be his last chance to play as a student. "I just can't wait for the season to start."The Gold and Black teams' seasons peaked when they played at Hinkle Fieldhouse for the State Finals.

"I shot two points during the game at Hinkle," Gold team member Keith said. "That was my favorite game. I was so excited, and my team gave me the ball a whole lot."The teams played their regular season games at Howe Middle School and Manual High School.

"A typical game is fun and joyous," Bumphus said. "Everyone is jumping around shouting. The last game was not so joyous, but the guys still had fun and enjoyed the experience."

Unfortunately, the Black team ended its season in tournament play against powerhouse Warrick County. "Our toughest competition was Warrick County," Coach Bumphus said. "They were the last team we played, and they were so big they just physically handled us. Our guys fought hard it was just too difficult."

However, Special Olympics teaches students so much more than how to shoot a basketball. According to Coach Bumphus, life lessons are learned on the court. Special Olympics teaches kids to work hard and to enjoy themselves and their accomplishments."The team grew tremendously throughout the season both as players and people, Coach Bumphus said. "They made me proud."

Ten Warren Central students volunteered their time to take a part of the Special Olympics season. On the court, they helped the team out and made sure everyone was participating. "They were all a huge help to me," Coach Bumphus said. "We would not have gone far if it wasn't for them."

Senior Tyrone Dixson has helped with the program for two years and throughout middle school, "I love seeing them have fun. They are good kids just like you and me. They like getting out there and scoring points." Sophomore Ashlee McCarty said, "My favorite part is seeing how motivated and excited the kids got before every game. Making it to the State finals was also very exciting."

For Coach Bumphus it isn't winning that matters it is "Seeing the joyous smile on the kids' faces."

{ Senior quarterback steps up performance, leads team to victory in battle of ranked teams }

On the Warrior's third game of the season against the Cincinnati Elder Panthers, senior quarterback Desmond Tardy enjoyed a coming-out party.

Tardy proved that he was not only a big-time player, but a leader as well.

Tardy was ready to step up as he moved into his second season as the starting quarterback after a disappointing Regional Championship loss to Ben Davis last year.

The game against Cincinnati Elder was held at the Ryle Sports Festival in Ryle, Kentucky, where six of the nation's top football teams were pitted head-to-head. Coming into the game, the Panthers were ranked sixth in the nation, and the Warriors were ranked tenth.

On the Warriors first offensive drive, Desmond Tardy threw a bomb down the middle of the field to wide-open senior receiver Kyle Wimberly. Wimberly exploded 39 yards to the endzone, giving Warren an early 6-0 lead.

Kyle Wimberly made another big play this time on defensive as he grabbed an interception on the next ensuing series. With the control of the game back in Tardy's hands, he came up with an amazing 47-yard touchdown scamper.

Tardy seemingly froze the defense when he reached daylight with his great vision and quick cutback moves.

"When he sees a hole, his eyes pop, and he just takes over," senior linebacker Chris Graham said about Tardy's great running.

"I just made my reads," said the Purdue-bound Tardy.

Tardy was not done just yet. With the score 12-7 in favor of the Warriors, Tardy darted 56 yards for another astounding touchdown. Desmond later added another touchdown run, this time from 36 yards out to put the Warriors in front for good by a score of 24-14.

Luckily, Tardy got over some early game jitters. "I didn't know what to think coming in because we never had seen them in person and film doesn't really tell you," Tardy explained after the victory.

"We're just crazy about Des," Graham explained.

stepping up

{ With star player injured, backup quarterback keeps playoff run alive }

With starting quarterback Desmond Tardy out of action, senior backup quarterback Bryan Engh delivered the best performance of his high school football career.

The Warriors were facing the 8-1 Lawrence Central Bears at home in the first game of Sectionals. The Warriors stood at 7-2 without their star quarterback Desmond Tardy, who hurt his shoulder in a loss the week before to Lawrence North.

The boys in black and gold were vulnerable after their loss, and the Bears wanted to continue their eight game winning streak with a victory over the highly praised Warriors. Several Lawrence Central players were quoted in the "Indianapolis Star" as saying that they could not wait to play the Warriors.

The weight of the game fell on the shoulders of Engh, despite the Warriors having two 1,000-yard rushers in the backfield. Engh's readiness was shaky, although he started as quarterback in middle school and practiced at quarterback the week leading up to the game instead of at his usual wide receiver position. Head Coach Kevin Wright even explained that when Desmond Tardy and Bryan Engh were freshmen, it was a toss-up to see who would start at quarterback.

Following a Lawerence Central field goal, the Warriors started things off on the ground with a six-yard touchdown run by Mark Bonds. Bryan Engh later added a 16-yard touchdown scurry to put the Men in Black ahead 19-3 at halftime.

Engh continued his tirade after halftime by scoring on a 17-yard touchdown, which looked almost identical to his previous score to put the Warriors ahead 26-3. Aaron Lacey, the team's leading rusher, added Warren's final score from 15 yards out to ensure the victory.

Lacey delivered an amazing performance with 20 rushes for 174 yards, but Bryan Engh was the story of the game, as he stepped into the driver's seat of the Warrior offense and not accept defeat. The senior quarterback, wide receiver, long snapper, and punter showed his depth by running 11 times for 92 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Warriors to a 39-10 victory.

"We're fortunate to have Bryan, who is very versatile and was ready when his time came," said Coach Wright.

rewrighting history

{ Head coach guides team through rollercoster season and into a state championship }

Six games into the season the Warriors were down and out after suffering an upset loss to the Carmel Greyhounds 20-23. Just as it seemed like everything would go sour, Head Coach Kevin Wright stayed strong and led his team to the promise land.

At the beginning of the season the Men in Black were ranked tenth in the nation and claimed a crucial victory over their long-time rival Ben Davis as well as a dominating victory over the nation's number six team. Things were looking amazing, and some people thought that the Warriors would not lose a game all season. A perfect season then turned into a rollercoaster ride when Coach Wright's mother passed away before the Warriors homecoming game which they won 69-0 over Terre Haute North. Instead of buckling down and falling apart, Coach Wright decided that he needed to be around for his team who continued to fight adversity all the way to the RCA Dome.

The black and gold was up against another black and gold when they played the Penn Kingsmen. Twenty-seven thousand fans were cheering and players were jumping up and down, but Coach Wright stayed poised and kept the team grounded by giving an inspirational speech telling them that Penn thought that the Warrior squad was a joke.

"They're laughing," Coach Wright stressed to his team before running out onto the field, "They're laughing!"

The Penn players and their 13,000 fans who drove down from Mishawka weren't laughing for long as Warren jumped out to an early 14-0 lead. Before anyone could realize what had actually happened, the Warriors were up 50-0 at halftime and won the game 57-7.

The Warriors broke state championship game records for most points in a half, most rushing yards, most rushing touchdowns and most yards of total offense. The charge on the field was led by Mr. Football Desmond Tardy who ran 14 times or 317 yards and four touchdowns. Senior running back Mark Bonds also delivered an astounding performance on the field with 11 rushes for 180 yards and three touchdowns.

Although coaches may not be able to make a physical impact on their sport, some coaches have the effect to change the way their players play and live.

beginners luck

{ Freshman sensation does not use lack of high school experience as an excuse }

Many freshmen do not get the privilege to be the leader of the varsity squad, let alone a team that was ranked in the top 15 in the state throughout the year. Thus was the case for freshman great De'Sean Turner and the Boys Cross-Country team.

Turner ran well, placed high, and broke many records that had stood for many years in just his first year of running at the high school level.

Among his accomplishments were being selected to the All Conference, All Sectional, All Regional, All Semi-State, and All State teams and breaking the freshman 4K and 5K records.

However, one performance stood above any of his previously mentioned successes. It was a performance that will be remembered for the rest of the young star's life.

At Brebeuf Jesuit in the Marion County Championship, Turner dug deep to separate himself from the pack to claim the individual Marion County championship. The 5,000-meter course was no obstacle for Turner, who completed the race in a time of 16 minutes and four seconds.

"It was exciting to have a freshman win County," Coach Joe Brooks said. "De'Sean took command of the race."

Not only did the amazing finish earn him individual recognition, it catapulted the team to sixth in the state en route to an appearance at Indiana University to race in the State Finals after falling short the past two years.

This season has been nothing less than spectacular for Turner and the Boys Cross Country team. We can only imagine the success of the team in the future with so much potiential lurking from the young runners of the team.

Although Turner has achieved so much success in such a short time, he is still learning and setting higher goals for the future. Nothing can be taken away from the young talent's accomplishments and feats against the best runners in the state.

"It feels great to know that I have already had so much success competing against people that have been running in high school longer than I have," Turner stated.

bittersweet season

{ Girls Cross Country team sets goal to make it past Regional and into Semi-State }

The girls cross country team had one thing to prove, and that was they could make it to Regionals, perform well, and go on to Semi-state for the third year in a row.

But before they went to Regionals, they had to make it past Sectionals. " Sectionals is not always the hardest, but should never be underestimated. We had to treat it like any other meet, especially since this determined whether or not we made it to Regionals," said head coach Jennifer Jensen. The top five teams would continue on in the state tournament.

They succeeded the first part of their task. In the 30 degree weather, the girls placed second out of 20 teams in Sectionals. "I couldn't have asked for a better performance. Everyone stepped up and did the best they could," said Coach Jensen.

The next part of the girls task to accomplish was to perform well in Regionals now that they had come so far. They prepared and did extra work in practice and the week before Regionals was hectic and intense. Ladies were competing harder at practice and reflected back on all the successes they had during the season.

They finished fifth in county, fifth in the MIC tourney, and had one team member named to the All-County team. The ladies had succeded all their goals so far. They had a solid season, they grew as a team, and they made it to Regionals. They all wanted the win for themselves, the team, the school, and of course, for bragging rights. Now all they had to do was run their best.

The chilli, cold air of they winter greeted them as they began to warm up before the race. The ladies prayed for the strength to finish the race the way it should be finished. They stepped up to the starting line and prepared to give their all. The gun sounded and the ladies were off.

When the race ended, and all the points were totalled, they did not place high enough to go on to Semi-State. "I think we were prepared physically but not mentally. We relied to much on our good season and Sectionals win and did not focus enough," said sophomore Bethany Ballard. With high hopes, the team plans on making it next year, and ever has a plan to win state finals.

high expectations

{ The girls volleyball team improves even more from last year's great performance }

It was an early, cold and rainy Saturday morning, and the girls volleyball team was just waking up. The girls were getting ready to embark on their biggest adventure yet by traveling to Arlington High School to prove to everyone that they could compete with the best. It was Sectional time, and the girls couldn't have been more prepared.

As the team entered the gym one could feel the tension in the air. Teams from all around were there watching each others moves, scouting one another. Sitting and watching with anticipation the girls were ready to take on their first challenge.

The girls first took the court with the ladies from Manual High School. The ladies dominated the court by only giving up a total of five points in the first two games. The third game was what highlighted senior Beth Cedoz's career with perfection. She was able to single handedly defeat the ladies of Manual High School by serving the girls 21-0 in the third and final match.

Then it was time for their real challenge against the ladies of Lawrence North. In the third game, while the Cathedral Irish smashed Arlington, the lady warriors worked the court with their mobility and dexterity that they had worked hard on all summer. It was finally time for the girls to put to test their skills in Sectionals. Most wouldn't think that it was volleyball season, but it was. It was the reason the girls had put long hard grueling hours in, to prove to everyone that they could do it. This day was what the team had been waiting and working for all season long. The girls had to step up and take action against the lady wildcats. The girls had already defeated the Wildcats in regular season and now was the time that they needed to keep their rein alive.

It was Sectionals, and they weren't going to give up easy against the Fighting Irish. Of the three main teams in Sectionals, Lawerence North and Warren Central were the underdogs compared to Cathedral.

The girls fought through to the end and never gave up. Though Cathedral was the favorite, the Lady Warriors were going to fight to earn a win. Unfortunately, the girls fell short to the ladies of Cathedral, but at least they were able to keep their pride. In the end the fighting Irish advanced onto the State Finals and came out victoriously.

overcoming adversity

{ The boys soccer team finds a chance to defeat the odds in the middle of a difficult season }

They weren't supposed to win. Nine games into the difficult season, the Warriors' soccer team had won only two matches. Two starters were out of the game, leaving the rest of the struggling team with a very slight opportunity to prove themselves against Lawrence North.

The game began. It was a cool night for an important conference game, and the team looked forward to competing. Lawrence North scored first, however, leaving the team sensing yet another defeat. All they could do was to play their best defense until halftime, holding the Wildcats to only one goal.

After the break, the Warriors saw more bad news as their all-purpose starter Chris McLaughlin had to leave the game due to a red card. Still, the team played their best defense until finally, Juan Salazar scored.

Then, for the first time, the idea of really winning entered the Warriors' mind, and never left. The excellent defense continued to prevail, stumping the Wildcats and preventing a comeback.

Later in the game, Salazar scored again, breaking the tie and lifting the spirits of the team. Now, it was once again up to the defense, which had held the Wildcats since the beginning of the game. They played as tough as ever, leaving Lawrence North stunned. As the game finally ended, the team piled onto each other in the middle of the field, elated that they had pulled off an incredible win in such harsh circumstances.

"It was our first win in a while, against a tough, in-conference team, so when the final whistle blew we all sang and made jokes on the bus ride home," Stephen Woodward said.

This game was a turning point in the season. It showed the team that if they played hard as a team, they could compete with other powerhouse teams such as Lawrence North.

Later in sectionals, thoughts of this game reminisced in the back of the team's mind as they beat Rushville 3-0.

It is certain that one of the best memories these players will have of their soccer career at Warren is this game where they proved to themselves and other teams that they had an abundance of talent and potential.

More than anything, the girls' soccer team wanted to beat local rival Scecina, despite the slim odds, the girls were able to make history, when Ashley Sehasse scored her record-breaking 27th goal, helping the Warriors to defeat the Crusaders in their home closer, which was also senior night.

"Ashley is a great athlete with a great attitude. She is able to make things happen on the field, which helps the overall moral of the team. Because of her great soccer skills she has become quite difficult for her opponents to defend. She has aquired these awesome skills because of her dedication and hard work," Coach Gary Roberts said.

On an early Saturday morning the girls found themselves with a fiery determination, knowing that their whole season had come down to this final game of their regular season. With their game faces ready, they stepped out onto the field with confidence and anticipation evident in their eyes.

The girls pushed through the tough season, preparing themselves to come out on top when it counted the most. As all athletes know, there is no better reward for a season of hard work than beating your rivals. The girls put to work the skills that they had developed so hard all year.

Even improving on last year's seventh place finish in their conference wasn't as important to them as ending the season with a bang.

As the game ended, everyone saw that the girls had beaten the Lady Crusaders on the Warrior's own turf, opening the doors for sectional action. Though their finish didn't reflect the girls' talent and skill, they still exceeded everyone's expectations by improving their overall finish.

As many would agree, the team could not ask for a better feeling than that of the morning of October 11, which now sets the precedent for future successes by the team.With persistence and perseverance the girls were able to dominate the field and finish strong (5-0), a win they will never forget.

"This year was one of the best seasons that we have had in about ten years. We had our second best season this year with many of our athletes being young we are expecting to do well for many years to come," Coach Roberts said.

senior leadership

{ Six seniors show the true meaning of senior leadership on and off the hardwood }

Nearly every coach in every sport among the high school and collegiate ranks stresses the importance of senior leadership among their players, and senior leadership may have been the biggest factor for the success of this year's Warren boys basketball team.

The Warrior squad racked up a 17-5 regular season record and an 18-6 overall record during their 2003-2004 season. The best record since the 1999-2000 Regional Championship team that posted a 21-6 record, may be largely credited to the play and leadership of the team's senior class players. This year's team consisted of six seniors - David Blair, De andre Brock, Peter Davis, Noah Douglas, Courtney Nunn and Kenny Page - who carried the girth of the workload in the tribe's 24 games. The senior players made it apparent from the opening game just how important their presence was when they tipped of against the Greenfield Central Cougars at Warrior Arena.

The senior players showed just how determined they were during their home opener with the Cougars. Although the Warriors were down 19-22 at the end of the first quarter and down 30-44 at halftime, they were able to find the strength for a comeback and claimed a 73-66 victory over the Cougars to start the season with a 1-0 record.

"They're gamers," Warrior Head Coach Scott Heady said. "They're guys that can step on the floor and perform."

The perseverance for these terrific senior players to make comebacks on the court is just one of many things that makes this senior core special. Coach Heady stressed just how proud he was with the way his senior players conducted themselves on and off of the court.

"We've got good quality people with high character, " Heady explained of his players.

Six senior players played in games for Warren's varsity boys basketball team and four of those players were starters. Without those players, the team's best season in four years may not have come about.

The six seniors all played key roles this season in one way or another. Although these players may have caused trouble for other teams on the court, they did not cause any trouble off of the court and that is true senior leadership.

solo senior

{ Only senior on team tries her best to lead the young team throughout the season }

Throughout the basketball season, the Lady Warriors had to learn to deal with a lack of leadership due to only one returning senior.

Although Mariesa Greene tried her best to lead the team of sophomores, the girls had slow starts in most of their games with comebacks at about the second or third quarter of games.

The issue of leadership was the most prevalent in the second Sectional game. The Varsity players came into the Arsenal Tech High School gymnasium with a first round win under their belts and a determination to prove themselves against the Cathedral Irish.

At the end of the first quarter, the ladies had the short end of the stick with a score of 5-11. After the second quarter quickly passed, they were still under the Irish 15-28.

They had to cover serious ground if they wanted to catch up with the Cathedral Irish to win the game and advance to the final round of Sectionals.

After the halftime pep talk with Coach Roger Kirkpatrick, the girls came out of the locker room with different looks on their faces. They played tough defense in the third quarter and allowed the Cathedral players to only put up 10 points, but the Lady Warriors were still behind with a score of 23-38.

When the Varsity girls went into the final quarter, they had only scored 23 points throughout the entire game, but the players still had a chance to win the game if they played their best basketball for the final eight minutes until the clock ran out. And that is just what the Lady Warriors did.

The Warren team ended the fourth quarter with 50 points on the scoreboard, which was more than twice the amount of all the points that the girls had accumulated throughout the game. In the last quarter, the players scored 27 points and kept the Cathedral Irish down to only putting up 16.

However, the Lady Warriors finished the game four points short with a final score of 50-54. The girls played their best, but in the end, it wasn't enough to defeat the Cathedral Irish who went on to lose to Arsenal Tech in the Sectional Championship game.

sweet revenge

{ Junior wrestler avenges two losses early in the State tournament to win his weight class }

The spotlight was shining on Jon Lloyd literally and figuratively on the Saturday night of the State Finals. As an enormous crowd looked down on the mats at the Conseco Fieldhouse, Lloyd accomplished what every wrestler dreams of: winning a state title.

The junior arrived at the finals on a bit of a slump. He had gone through the entire regular season without a defeat and was ranked #1 in the 103-pound class for most of the year.

In sectional action at Shelbyville, Lloyd encountered his first defeat to Beech Grove's Ethan Harris. Lloyd then endured another defeat in regionals at Beech Grove to Pike's Bryce Cleland.

Things looked to be falling apart a bit for Lloyd, but he did not mind that he had taken over the role as underdog in some people's minds. Lloyd's confidence was undeterred and he regrouped to overcome his burdens by downing both Harris and Cleland in the semi-state to advance to the state finals.

On the opening night of the finals, Lloyd drowned the suspense by outmaneuvering Terrence Hubbard of New Albany in immediate fashion in the first period.

Lloyd then had to play the waiting game until the ensuing night when he came out even stronger than the night before to defeat Merrillville's Gary Nelson, Fort Wayne Snider's Brandon Andrews, and previously undefeated Eric McGill of Munster to capture his initial state title.

Lloyd ended the season with an exceptional 45-2 record and became Warren Central's first individual state champion since current University of Minnesota standout Danny Williams in 2002.

Lloyd also followed his father's footsteps by becoming a state champion at Warren. His dad, Rob Lloyd, etched his spot in the Warrior history books by competing on the 1980 men's Gymnastics state championship squad. Names such as Pat Mahaffey, Andy Watt, Scott Spencer, Danny Williams, Scott Ellis, Darrin Duncan, Dave Bridgeforth, Rob Walke and Matt Puckett grace the walls of Warren's Athletic Hall of Fame as state wrestling champions.

Now Jon Lloyd's name will be added to the wall, where it will forever be enshrined in the hallowed gallery for future Warrior athletes to inspire. "Going down in history for winning state is something no one can take away from me," Lloyd said.

newfound leaders

Every year fans wonder who will be the one to fill the shoes of the seniors who leave. The girls gymnastics team found two of them this year as the girls ended their year season 16-9.

Sophomores Leslie Elliot and Megan Fannin are true leaders and will be the ones to lead the gymnastics team for the next few years.

This season showed everyone all year long why they were leaders with Megan's exceptional skill and Leslie's nearly perfect scores during meets. These two girls did more than lead by example, Leslie and Megan also were vocal leaders.

Besides the team having only one senior in Kelle Niebert, they also got through the crazy part of their season when Coach Bruns had her baby in December.

"I knew Leslie and Megan were going be something special, but not so soon. I could tell because even when we lost our first three games they remained enthusiastic," Coach Bruns said.

Leslie and Megan both love gymnastics and hope to pursue their careers further. "I've been in gymnastics since I was three and I love to do it," Leslie said.

The girls won't stop until they are the best and win state. Megan and Leslie both had a great post season run. After standing out as the best on the team. The girls advanced to Regionals along with senior Kelle Niebert. Megan had a outstanding floor performance during Regionals though was not voted to state. Leslie was excellent in Regionals placing second on the floor with a 35.05 and an 87 on balance beam.

"I was happy with how I did even though last year I broke a record," Leslie said.

Although she was intimidated by all the great gymnasts at State, Leslie performed well and placed in both of her events. Both girls agree, that it is hard to perform well in the tournament especially when you get deeper into the tournament and you have less fans there to see you win.

The girls love to train and continue to compete in gymnastics even after the season is over. The girls go to gymnasiums and train and hone their skills for the next season.

season of change

There's no other way to put it: it was a tough year for the swimming team. However, at the end of a season that produced only two team victories for the boys (and none for the girls), there are still several positive memories on which to look back, including the unexpected success of La'Toya Williams.

In the heart of January, during the important MIC Conference Tournament, La'Toya found herself in the midst of a difficult season—her first on the team. Lined up among several experienced competitors from various other schools, she prepared to take off down her lane in the 50-yard freestyle, an important event.

As the bell sounded, she dove off of the platform, and felt a rush of energy and excitement that she hadn't experienced before in a meet. She could feel that she had started unusually well, and pushed hard to keep her momentum.

La'Toya reached the other side, and knew she was half way there. Her relative position to the other opponents signaled to her that she was doing particularly well. She could now tell she was getting close, and kept pushing, feeling her energy manifest into more adrenaline. "I felt like I was ready to drown," said La'Toya, "but I knew I needed to support my team and myself, and I did it."

Finally, La'Toya felt her fingers hit the board, and she could finally look up to clearly see her score as the flood of momentum suddenly subsided. Accustomed to seeing a minute-something after this event, she was shocked to find that she had swam it in less than 59 seconds. "I felt very happy," she said.

It was an important goal for her to break the one-minute barrier in this event, and finally she had (in the most significant meet at that point in the season) despite the fact that the closest she had gotten to that barrier so far was 1:08.

This important personal victory added momentum to the continual improvement of the team as a whole. Although few wins were seen from both sides, individual victories and personal successes such as La'Toya's continued to imply the betterment of the swimming team.

making cuts

{ Sophomore experiences the ups and downs of trying to make the cheerleading squad }

While most students are rushing out the door ready to go home after a long day at school, sophomore Mackenzie Hines heads to the locker rooms to prepare for the first day of basketball cheerleading tryouts.

She grabs a bite to eat to boost her energy and changes into a pair of cheer shorts and a tank top.

Cheerleading tryouts are not like other athletic tryouts because it requires a combination of personality and athletic skills.

A person trying out must be able to yell, but not scream, smile, even if she doesn't want to, have lots of school spirit, even though she may not be in a good mood, and be able to memorize moves.

Cheerleading tryouts are three days long, but the preparation begins long before the first day.

"I try to work on my tumbling and jumps to make them as good as they can be," Mackenzie said.

Besides the physical preparation, the person trying out must know that there will be a lot of competition and be willing to give it her best.

Before someone can tryout, she must complete a cheerleading application which consists of two teacher recommendations, a grade sheet, and an information sheet.

On the first two days of tryouts, the girls are taught a cheer, dance, and chant. Then, on the third day, everyone performs them in front of the other girls and a panel of judges.

Girls also perform two jumps and tumbles to the best of her ability. Tumbling might include a back handspring, back tuck, running back handspring or tuck.

Mackenzie performs her standing back handspring and her running back handspring.

The panel of judges is made up of the coaches and two or three guest judges. The judges score each girl on motions, dancing, tumbling skills, jumps, and spirit.

Mackenzie anxiously returned to school early the next morning to find her name under the boys varsity list.

The preparation, practicing, and hard work paid off for Mackenzie this season.

scholor athlete

{ Senior shows the true meaning of a student-athlete by putting his academics first }

For some students athletics come before academics, but senior Shane Whittington has shown his genius on the track as well as in the classroom.

Whittington is the captain of the boys track team and he also was a key contributor to the State Championship football team. But what is more amazing than Shane's athletic diversity is the fact that he balances success in sports with successful academics.

Whittington was an honor roll student as well as one of only two Warren Central students to receive the prestigious Eli Lilly Endowment Scholarship. The scholarship gives Indiana high school seniors full tuition to any college in the state of Indiana as well as $800 towards book fees each semester.

"I think athletics gives discipline to get the academics finished," Head Track Coach Dennis McNulty said.

Coach McNulty believes that athletics, along with other extracurricular activites, give discipline to achieve academic success. Statistics show that students involved in sports have higher grade point averages due to the motivation to remain a participant in a certain athletic field such as Shane Whittington.

Whittington was a State Finals medallist last season for the Warriors and helped lift the team to a 51-13 overall record and a fifth place finish in State. This year Whittington ran the 400-meter dash and was part of the 4x400-meter relay team. Whittington enjoys a season best time of 52.66 seconds (electronic time) in the 400-meter dash and a season best time of 3 minutes and 25.1 seconds while running with the 4x400-meter relay team.

Shane's tremendous dedication and senior leadership for the Warrior track squad makes him an unofficial team captain. Whittington athleticism even helped lead the Warriors to a sectional title this year.

With the help of Whittington's strong senior leadership, this year's track squad enjoyed a season high ranking of number five in Indiana's Class 4A poll, had a dual meet record of 3-2 and earned a first place finish in the 40th annual Warren Relays.

"Shane is a strong, silent leader," Coach McNulty said, "He works hard."

decision time

{ Two seniors weigh their options and select colleges to continue their success }

When you are with a successful program like the Warren girls track team, the rewards flow in regularly. In the case with senior standous Briana Cunningham and Mariesa Greene, the athletic scholarships roll in as well.

Cunningham has agreed to follow in Coach Hope Sanders' footsteps by running for the Fighting Illini of the University of Illinois and Mariesa Greene is set to long jump for the track team and play basketball for the University of Illinois-Chicago Flames.

Every year, many athletes across the country encounter the ordeal of selecting a college. Most of the time, one's final decision boils down to location, the success of the athletic program, and academics. But, as Cunningham and Greene both found out, the whole process was a little difficult to deal with.

"I finally found a college that had offered everything I wanted athletically and academically," Greene said. "My whole family liked what they were offering, and I wasn't too far from home."

Cunningham and Greene then had to cope with the routine of a college scout coming to visit them. It can be a distraction for some, but others can find it as motivation to prove them that they are worthy competitors.

"Sometimes it was a little time consuming, but it was helpful that they are willing to pay for you," Cunningham said.

In the end the girls were satisfied with their final decisions.

"Not only am I happy with my decision, the school colors happen to be my favorites," Cunningham said.

Cunningham and Greene have experienced just about everything in their four years at Warren Central, and they have some words of advice that will help student-athletes balance their schoolwork and athletics.

"Don't wait until the last minute to complete something," Cunningham said. "If you can do your work ahead of time, it will be helpful."

It's obvious that these girls will be something special not only in college, but later in life as well, because of their work ethic on and off the track.

finishing strong

{ Baseball team falls behind early in the game, but regroups late in the game to claim a win }

The fourth game of the season was one of the most important for the Warrior baseball team; but such is the same for any team, in any sport, coming off of a loss. Days after two opening double-header wins against Northwestern High School, the Warriors suffered a 14-5 defeat to Brebeuf and were left unsure of themselves and the team.

This led up to an important game against Beech Grove. The team had a perfect oppurtunity to prove their early success, or lose, and begin their season like the previous one, in which the team went 14-16.

Thus, the Warriors found themselves sitting in their familiar dugout, hosting the Hornets on a warm day in late April. But as the game began, the heat of the situation had gotten to the team. The fidgety defense slipped, allowing seven batters from Beech Grove's relatively weak line touch home plate.

Further, the strong Warren offense failed to produce more than a couple runs, falling behind 7-2 with only three innings left to play.

However, the game changed drastically in the fifth. The Warriors got on a role thanks to two doubles and a homerun by Dustin Polston, who had driven in five runs when the game had finished.

When the defense came back onto the field, they stopped the Hornets in their tracks. "After Beech Grove scored seven runs in the first three innings we we shut them out for the last three. At that point we had an offensive explosion that carried us to a 17-7 five-inning win," said coach Chris Schmidt.

The game ended in the middle of the fifth as the ten-run-rule came into effect. But the confidence of the team was even higher than their score, as they prematurely sent Beech Grove home after dominating the last three innings.

"Once the team overcame a 7-2 deficit in this game they knew that they had the ability to beat teams even after falling behind early. This game was an early season learning experience for a relatively inexperienced varsity team, from which they were able to build," said coach Schmidt. "The experience is valuable in understanding that you can never make the assumption that a game is over, despite the score.

This win lead to three more consecutive victories for the team and motivated their success throughout a winning season.

clutch performance

{ Softball team finds way to beat conference rival in final inning after a slow start to season }

To begin the season, the Lady Warriors softball team lost four of their first five games. They had yet to play a conference game, in arguably the best conference in the Midwest region. Spirts were down and the team morale was suffering.

The upcoming schedule did not look too appealing either. Next up on the ladies calender was conference rival Carmel, who were coming off a .500 record in the Boonville Tourney.

However, entering his 25th season as the head coach of the softball team, Dave Stroud remained optimistic. He kept with his number one pitcher, senior Beth Lane, to start the game against Carmel and hoped for the offense to explode to give Lane some run support.

If the team could pull out this win, they knew they could turn their season around and gain much of their confidence back that they had lost throughout their first five games. They put their game faces on and went out onto the field with the mentality that today was their day and nothing was going to come between them and a victory. A win would also start the team off on the right foot as they entered conference play.

The teams were ready and the first pitch was thrown. Both teams battled back and forth all game long. Niether team could seem to pull though and break the game open. Lane was having a superb game and the defense was playing terrific behind her.

"Beth Lane is always really consistent in her pitches. She does not walk people and she makes hitters put it in play, and when the defense makes plays, we are a really good team," said assistant coach Jerry Highley.

As the game entered the bottom of the seventh inning with the Lady Warriors coming up to bat, the game was knotted at two runs a piece. During the bottom of the seventh, the ladies were able to get runners on base to put pressure on Carmel.

Up to the plate came senior Chaune Armstead and with the game on her sholders, she was able to slap the ball past the Carmel defense and bring in the game-winning run to edge out Carmel with a finally score of 3-2.

family matters

{ Sisters are able to use their family bonds in order to improve their tennis game }

Many athletes enjoy playing for teams that are filled with life-long friends; it seems to make the long and difficult practices easier to endure when there is constant fun and laughter in the atmosphere. But for this year's girls tennis team, it was just a little different.

The girls took the notion of friendship even further with the addition of sisters Callie and Alyssa Dewing. There have been many teams that have had family members play together, but these girls depend on each other for every move.

Each wrong or right move they make could be the critical one. The girls both started playing in the number one doubles position. With more experience, the only freshman on the team, Alyssa, was able to move to the number one singles spot.

"Playing in the number one singles spot as a freshman has really given me a lot of experience and competing with girls that are better than me has really helped a lot too," Alyssa Dewing said.

Junior Callie now defeats her opponents with the help of captain and senior Sarah Kiszewski.

Despite what many would think, the sisters are able to leave their family quarrels and friendly disputes at the entrance of the court. They are able to get down to business with their practices, though some may feel that two young sisters playing together on the same team could cause problems within the family these girls don't let that bother them.

"Even though we might have had an argument at home we don't let that stuff interfere with our game," Alyssa said.

They use each other for support when they are not playing to their full potential and just as any other teammate would normally do, they help each other with their mental and physical game.

"Because we are sisters, we are able to help each other. We can communicate better because we knoweach others strengths and weaknesses," Callie said.

With each other as teammates they have that little extra something special to get them through the game more smoothly, the sisterly bond.

breaking out

{ Unexpecting coach amazed by junior golfer's vast improvements over the offseason }

There is no one who knows how it happens. The person it happens to usually has no idea how it happened. But every year in athletics someone who was average or just a role player proves to be a diamond in the rough.

They are the athletes like Jermaine O'Neal or Brett Favre who were nobodies, sitting on the bench and who suddenly emerged as stars and as a focal point of their teams.

Junior Joshua Thompson with the boys varsity golf team this season was the team's number one golfer and was the most consistent throughout the season.

"If you would have asked me if Josh was even a contender for the number one spot, I would have said no way," Coach Al Darko said.

Josh Thompson last year was the number 4 or 5 golfer and really was not looked at to be as much a threat as he has been this season.

"Josh has been playing the most consistent golf I've seen him play," Coach Darko said.

The goal of any golfer is to play well every night and every hole. He has been able to do just that by ripping his way through his matches and duel meets, but he has really shined during the tournaments.

Josh placed second in the Ritter Classic with a 73 and second again in the Chatard Invitational with a 77. Josh also placed fourth in the Southmont Invitational with a 76 and a fifth place at the County tournament shooting a 77.

Josh got better with each match and increased the gap between him and his teammates. Josh ended with a differential of 2.58, which led the team. Earlier in the season he had a differential of 2.76 and with Josh's consistent play it continued to lower.

Josh had no one who could catch him, especially the way he had played . The closest golfer to him was Chris Seibel with a differential of 3.32. Josh Thompson was the cream of the crop and looked to be an unexpected hero while the golf team focused on a state championship.

Junior Nikki Atherton endures a kidney transplant at only 16

On average, she takes 20 pills a day.

They ward off blood clots, abnormal blood pressure, anti-fungal infections, viral infections and transplant rejection. Junior Nikki Atherton sits at her mother's feet listing off her numerous medications, describing where the surgeons cut, and noting how her chronic kidney failure was a surprise to everyone in her family.

Her mother, Debra Davis, describes the day that they found out Nikki would need a kidney transplant. "It was sudden. Turns out it had been going on for a little bit, but no one knew anything about it," Debra said.

The only hint of Nikki's condition was a reoccurring virus that made her sick in her stomach. The weeks before the diagnosis Nikki missed more school than normal. "So then we took her to the doctor," Debra said, "and he ran some lab work and called us on Thursday and told us to take her to the hospital because all her lab work was out of wack. Her blood pressure was sky high."

One of Nikki's kidneys had failed, and the other was only functioning at 15 percent. A person needs ten percent of one kidney to work in order to survive. Debra along with her sister, nephew and father tested in hopes of being a match. Fortunately, Debra matched from the start, "If she needed anything, I would give it to her. It wasn't even a second thought. She needed a kidney."

For four months before Nikki received her donated kidney, she lived her life around dialysis, which she had to go through three days a week four hours at a time. "I never felt bad before the surgery or when I found out about my kidney failure. I just didn't want to be on dialysis anymore," Nikki said.

On February 4, Nikki received her mother's kidney. The surgery took approximately five hours and was successful.

Nikki had a perfect match within her immediate family; however, many do not. Finding a matching organ can be the deciding factor if a patient lives or dies. Some have time to wait. Many more do not.

"Each of us carries with us precious and perishable health resources that only serve our needs for so long," Sam Davis, director of Indiana Organ Procurement Organization, said. "At the end of our lives, we can either let those resources save others, or let them go to waste."

According to Davis, about 100 people every day are added to a transplant waiting list in the United States and another 17 people die every day waiting for the organ that never comes.

IOPO has seen an increase in the number of teens who have declared their wish to be a donor. "Some of our most touching stories are about teens who tragically lost their lives and had made it known that donating was a gift they felt strongly about," Davis said.

Organ transplants are very successful. For all the organs that can be transplanted, more than 70 percent of the organs are still working properly at the end of the five years.

"None of us knows which side of this equation we might find ourselves on-being a donor or needing a donor," Davis said. "It could be you, a family member or close friend."

WC STUDENTS OFTEN stayed after school waiting for rides, practice, or just to chill with their friends. The PAC, commons, and fieldhouse were popular areas to occupy during the wait.

CLASS PARTIES, fund raisers, hanging out with friends and so much more were all apart of WC students lives.

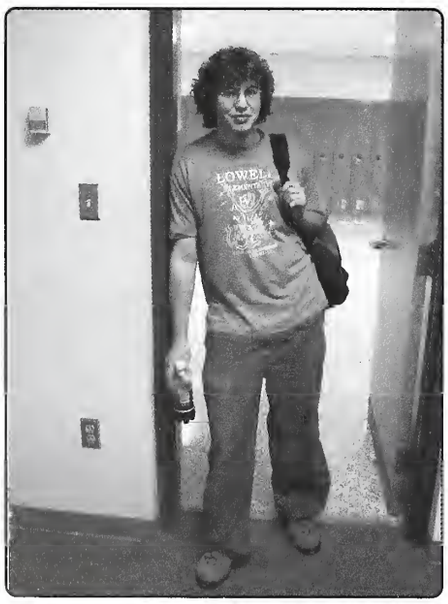
Top 5 differences between Freshmen & Seniors



1. Since freshmen barely make it to class on time, they always have a bookbag weighing them down with every single book they have. Seniors, on the other hand, only have books for one class, who cares if they're late.
2. Seniors always have a drink with them. Why? Becasue they know where they're favorite kind is, and, well, freshmen barely make it to class let alone have time to get a drink.
3. Remember your first day of school, you wanted to make sure that you look your best. Now seniors remember you first day senior year . . . as long as you were comfortable then you knew you looked good.
4. Two minutes till class starts and you're on the other side of the building, what do you do? Freshmen run like the wind and barely make it. Seniors take their time and stroll in minutes late.
5. Freshmen always look scared and stressed out. They hope they look OK and what are they going to do about 3rd period homework that they didn't do. Seniors always have the look of laid back royalty.

Q: What was your closest brush with a celebrity?
A: When I was in Clearwater Beach Florida, I saw Hulk Hogan talking on his cell phone about 10 feet away.

Q: What is your most proud moment?
A: Making it into high school without failing.

Q: What is one thing you want to do before you die?
A: Get a 1972, Corvette Stingray with a 427 in it.

First Day Jitters

I walked cautiously down the G hallway clutching nervously to the straps of my backpack. I glanced over at the throngs of people who had surrounded me during the passing period. It's the first day of school and the sophomores (who have only been semi-upperclassmen for three seconds) are already taunting the freshmen while the seniors and juniors are walking around like they own the place, Me and the others from the class of '07 are just trying to do our best to look cool and fit in.

"Take B to G to S," I told myself silently in my head. "No, wait. I could take B to upstairs G and then go into S. Then again, I could also take the J hallways into the E and connect into the S." Where was I supposed to go first? Would I find my classes? I was scared to death that I would walk in 20 minutes late to my first class, and everyone would turn to look at me. I would be in the spotlight—the dorky freshman finally arriving to first period.

> "Entering a new school and being the youngest of the bunch isn't the easiest thing for anyone."

Entering a new school and being the youngest of the bunch isn't the easiest thing for anyone. Freshmen are quite intimidated the first day, especially going to a huge school like Warren. Most new students are unsure about classes, and they're unsure if they'll ever find them. As Mr. Burchett is fond of saying, I found that Warren was much like a small town. It doesn't take long to find your way around, but before you do, it's easy to get lost.

I found that most everyone else seemed to know each other. They all hugged and embraced, talked and relived the events that had taken place since they had last been together. Everyone was catching up on each other's vacations. I found couples who had barely made it through a whole seven hours without each other and were now reuniting at school.

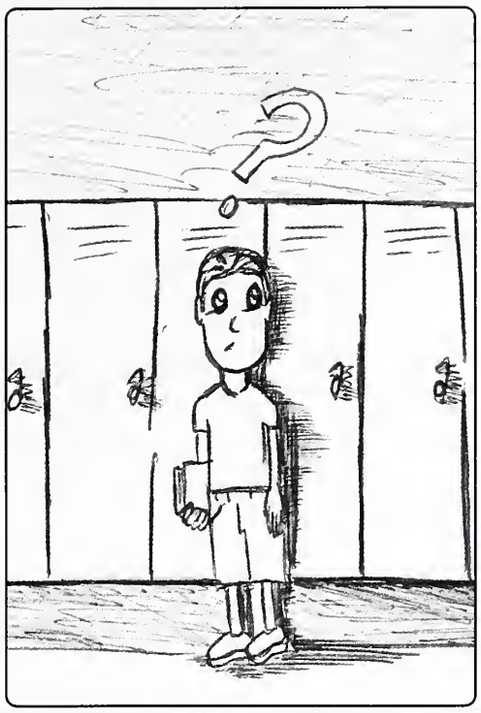
And though the upperclassmen were trying to scare us, my own peers were the ones who I was worried about. Do I look good? Will I fit in? What if I don't know anyone at lunch? Who will I sit with? These are just some off the many questions that were going through my mind. I was stuck in a classroom with 30 people, only two of which I could hopefully put a name with. As time went on, I got to know the people, but on the first day it got, as I am sure most everyone knows, uncomfortable.



As the day went by, everyone seemed happier. The school didn't seem so gigantic. My fears calmed. All my questions were answered, and I guess high school wasn't as bad as I thought it would be. I was glad, though, when that first day was over and I could say that I successfully conquered my first six-and-a-half hours of high school. Though I still feared the next day, I knew that the jitters and trembling of the first day would be forever behind me.

Q: Have you ever been out of the country?
A: Yes, I was born in Germany and have been back to visit. I have also been to France.

Q: What is your most prized possession?
A: It would probably be one of my necklaces with half a heart charm that my dad gave me when I was younger.

Q: What is the dumbest thing you have ever done?
A: I was talking to my friend and she said, "TMI" (too much info.) and I said, "Tim? Tim who?"

eXposing the GQE

We weren't allowed to eat or drink. We weren't allowed to sleep. We weren't allowed to bring anything to read, or unfinished homework to work on. Does this sound like boot camp to anyone else? In reality this was "GQE 2003."

For me, sitting in room B103, a cold room that I had never been in before, in the middle of September for three days that seemed like 13, not being able to do anything but sit facing forward with my "Number 2 pencil only," and filling in my circles completely, until my mark was "heavy and dark,"—that's what I remember about the Graduation Qualifying Exam.

> "Wow! If I hadn't passed the GQE, I might not be allowed to graduated high school!"

For me, it was just another standardized test; it wasn't that big of a deal. I probably stared at the chalkboard looking like a complete zombie while listening to the instructor half-heartedly. I did see a light at the end of the tunnel though. For me, this test marked one thing: the end of standardized testing in my high school life!

Okay, I may still have to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), but that's so far in the future; and that's not something I have to take days out of my life for. And sure, I guess this test should have been more than just another test to me, since it was a deciding factor as to whether I will be able to receive my high school diploma in two years or not. But the significance of the GQE was lost on my immature way of thinking.

It occurs to me now that I'm actually thinking, "Wow. If I hadn't passed the GQE, I might not be allowed to graduate high school." That's a hard thing for me to handle. For me to spend four years of my life on something and work so hard, then to have it be disregarded because of one test—that's hard for me to even contemplate.

But it's not an unheard of thing to not pass. Out of the 864 sophomores who were tested, 584 of them (68 percent) passed the English section and 588 sophomores (68 percent) passed the mathematics. Perfect scores were even obtained on the math portion by Warren students, but the scores for Warren sophomores ranged from 300- 720. The range for English was 300-720, with the perfect being 800.

I deserve a quality education—so does everyone else. The GQE is just trying to make sure Hoosier students have learned the standardized skills necessary for the rest of high school and after high school is over. I guess the Graduation Qualifying Exam is more important than I realized at the time. Becky Klimaszewski

A: Spend time with the WHOLE family

The story of X...

Once, in the town of Oxnard, California, lived a young man; a young xylophone player to be exact. His name was Xavier. He was after the heart of a certain foxy lady, but didn't exactly have any muscle to flex, so to speak. So, he tried to impress her with his special skill he called "Xtreme Xylophone." Sources still aren't certain what "Xtreme Xylophone" was, but our hero thought it was very attractive to the opposite sex.

He was apparently very wrong, as in all his travels no women ever flocked to his xylophone playing skills. Even the woman he loved ran away with another man. "He's educated! He's an Oxford man!" was her excuse, but Xavier would never get over her. He finally gathered up his meager belongings (not exactly an exorbitant amount of money) and left Oxnard to travel across the country. As he moved across Texas, he began to realize that maybe xylophone playing might not be the best way to make a living.

He thought of trying to play the guitar, but realized that maybe the axe might be a little extreme. All the same, he was excited about this new chapter of his existence. He felt he had the moxie to make living in this world, even though he was only sixteen. Sure, he had been a little lax in his duties at home, but he promised himself he would take on the most Quixotic attitude he could muster.

He finally reached his destination, and upon examining his surroundings decided that the glowing descriptions of New York City he had heard were more than a little exaggerated. He wondered if maybe he should nix this idea and head back home. Finally, though, he decided to stick to his guns and fix his focus on his goals. He would cross the River Styx to make something of himself if it was necessary.

"Once, in the town of Oxnard, California, lived a young man; a young xylophone player to be exact."

No need to wax poetic about it though. Xavier was excellent with his instrument and soon worked his way up extraordinarily quickly. He faxed home a picture of himself with his adoring fans (mostly sexy women and men in expensive suits of course.)

Unfortunately, he soon grew tired of living in the city. The mix of existentialism and the materialism of his extravagant life began to wear on him. It was hard to explain, but he needed to go home. When he finally got there, he was exuberant. He had proved his excellence and felt he could now relax.

Every once in a while he still releases an exclusive "Xtreme Xylophone" album, and his fame his extended to nearly every country in the world. His fixation on fame satisfied, he can now focus on being ordinary, instead of extraordinary.

The letter "X"

Origin of the letter X

The Greek alphabet is considered the origin of most modern European alphabets, including the one we use. The letter X in the English language is derived from Greek letter chi, written as "X." It is likely that most of the Greek alphabet was created from the ancient Semitic alphabet.

Making Their Mark

Few seniors at WC make an early exit

Senior Lindsay Moyer walked out of Warren Central for the last time as a student on December 19, 2003. Although the majority of her classmates returned to Warren after Winter Break, she started her college career at IUPUI majoring in Business management.

"I definitely think starting college mid-year was a benefit," Moyer said. "I decided my sophomore year that graduating early sounded like a good idea, but I really decided my junior year to definitely do it."

According to Counseling Services Director Ms. Joann Hawks, this year five students graduated early. The state of Indiana says a student must have at least seven semesters of high school to receive a diploma. "We like them to finish up [their senior year,]" Ms. Hawks said. "Education in public high school is cheap when you get to college it is big money."

Although Lindsay acknowledges the CSC did not think graduating early was a good idea, she believes the benefits outweigh the negatives. "I now have an earlier start on college and career choices," Lindsay said. "The transition to college wasn't hard because I had the advantage of seeing other college students and was able to prepare myself."

According to Lindsay, anyone who wants to graduate early should prepare himself or herself by getting ready for a different academic life.

"College is different in many ways," Lindsay said. "There is a lot more lecturing, larger class sizes, and not much personal attention. You are going to school to work towards a career choice."

Lindsay was excited and ready for college.
"I don't miss Warren because I am not there to see or hear what I am missing," Lindsay said. "I miss the laid back atmosphere and many of the teachers and staff."

However, according to Ms. Hawks, staying in high school for an additional semester is a smarter move than leaving.

"It is hard to start any academic program mid-year," Ms. Hawks said. "Kids are better to receive a full senior year education when they leave Warren they will be stronger in English and math."

Many vocational tracks in the Walker Career Center require two years of instruction to receive a certification.

"Students who graduated early can take part in senior benefits," Ms. Hawks said. "They can go to Prom. They get notice of all senior activities like the senior luncheon even though they are not enrolled in day school."

Lindsay chose to come back for Commencement. A decision, according to Ms. Hawks, not many mid-year graduates make.

"Students who graduate early need to realize once you leave high school," Ms. Hawks said, "it is never the same again."

SENIOR PRANKS STARTED EARLIER THAN USUAL IN 2004 with this dangerous one in early fall. Although senior pranks were highly frowned upon, seniors found many ways to carry on the tradition.

ALL YEAR LONG there were many "Senior Only" activities. These inlcuded Fall Fest, Bachelor Auction, as well as Senior Week.

Seniors vs. Faculty

"Third time's a charm. We have lost two games in a row. We can't lose three. We'll be back."
-Mr. Burton

THE FACULTY FOUGHT hard during the entire game trying to regain the title after losing last year. Yet, when all was said and done the seniors came out on top, for the second year in a row, 76-71.

Nicole Bowersox

Dear Nicole,

Congratulations! It's hard to believe that you are 18 and going to leave us soon to go to college. We are so proud of you and honored that we are your parents. You have brought us to such joy and wonderment over the years. Always trust in God and always be true to yourself. We have such love and respect for you, words cannot really express our true feelings. Stay the caring, loving, genuine person that you are!

Love Always,
Mom and Dad

Josh Chocklett

Josh,

You are the closest thing to a son I have. I am proud of the way you have handled life's obstacles and look forward to watching you grow into the wonderful man I know you will be. Always remember that I am here for you no matter what and that my love is unconditional. Congratulations on completing those 12 grueling years of school. Now you are free to make all of life's big decisions on your own!

Love,
Annie

Dear Josh,

Congratulations! You made it, and you did it yourself! This day has come for you because God has blessed you and your family. Life and school have taught you well, some painful lessons, but many more that were wonderful. From the adversity your strength was born.You may have lost an inning, but we all know you have won the game.

As long as our Country with its laws in place do not outlaw hunting, fishing, hard work, and enjoying time with family and friends you will continue to grow happy, and always be able to smell life's greatest aroma of flowers and enjoy God's gift of your mom, dad and sister.

Jim & Phyllis Coehrich

Josh

Congratulations!!! There are no words to tell you how proud we are of you. We got to watch you come into this world and we're so glad we've gotten the chance to see you grow into a young man. We love you with all our hearts.

Grandma and Grandpa Chocklett

Josh

You will never know how proud we are to be your parents. We have watched you grow into a young man. As you move forward, always remember we're behind you in whatever you do.

Love you always,
Mom & Dad

Brandon Linn

Brandon,

It is time for us to accept the fact that our little boy has grown into a handsome young man. We are so proud of you! We have always admired the wonderful qualities you possess . . . being fun, loving, determined, energetic and full of life. You have worked hard and achieved many things during these years. The memories of your experiences will be something you will value and treasure for a lifetime. Believe in yourself as you continue to pursue your future dreams. You always do live life to the fullest. You have given us a lifetime of happiness, love, inspiration, and pride. We wish all these things for you as you reach for the stars. We will always be there, reaching along with you.

We love you always,
Mom, Dad, & Eric

Krys Butcher

In July of 1985, a week after I turned 40 years of age, I was given the biggest surprise of my life. I was going to be a mother again. I was not happy! I had three teenagers already and was looking forward to being "free again". But God had other things in store for me. Nine months later that other thing was a beautiful daughter that we called Rebekah Krystyne. I was put in my place very quickly. She helped us thru her siblings teen years and gave us something to enjoy together. She has continued to do that. Her compassion, love for her family, and love of her saviour still fills all of our lives with joy. Even when I am a little pieved at her, I thank my God above for my wonderful daughter Becky Boo!

I love you,
Mom

Becky,

You are about to take a big step in your life. It will be one of several. I watched you grow from a little baby to a beautiful young woman. You have made me very very proud of you, I could not have asked for any better daughter. My prayer for you is that you never change and may you always be as successful as you want, for only you can limit yourself.

I love you.
Dad

Penelope,

On this the pinnacle of your accomplishments, you most beloved sister, brother-in-law, and nephew, want to congratulate and let you know how proud we are of you reaching this milestone in your life. We know that if your faith remains strong you will always be successful.

We love you!
Mark,Lynn, & Logan

Auntie,

You have been my role model since day one and never left my side. You are like the big sister I never had. I have seen you go through many different crazy stages, gotten kicked out of your room, and yelled at everyday. But I have loved you through it all. So when you finally have your babies . . . I'm not gonna babysit (JK).

Love you,
Beth

Lauren Downer

Lauren-

Your future begins on Wednesday, May 26,2004. Don't be afraid because you have had great teachers, friends and family by your side and they will be there to help you on your next adventure. You have been a great daughter, sister, friend, and student. You have all the tools-knowledge and wisdom to accomplish your dreams and goals.

Life is truly a very precious journey and you know not to take any moment of it for granted because it can change in a second.

Thanks for being a joy in your life and making us always proud and very lucky to have you for a daughter and sister.

We love you!
Dad, Mom, and Zachary

Justin Muncy

Justin,

Can it possibly be that time where you take that next step in life? Like your first steps as a baby, this step is daunting but gratifying. We know you will face this step with your usual confidence.

We are so proud of you.

Alysha Middleton

Alysha,

You are such a beautiful person, inside as well as out. I am so very proud of the young woman you have become and am thankful for the strong bond we share. I will always support you, stand behind you, be there for you wherever, whenever, whatever it takes.

I love you heart and soul, more than life itself. You are the greatest gift GOD has ever blessed me with and there is nothing you could ever do or say that would make me love you less or stop loving you. Throughout all the stages of your life, you will always be "my pride and joy, my little girl, my Sweetpea."

Love Always,
Momma

To a BEAUTIFUL daughter (both inside and out) that dad and I will really miss seeing on a daily basis.With your sweet smile, great attitude, and drive to succeed. We all know that you will accomplish your dreams. Don't let anyone ever hold you back. You have come so far, but have so much more to achieve. Always remember who you are, what you believe in, and where you have been. After 12 years of hard work and dedication, now you can see what it takes to succeed. With your determination you should have no problem meeting you goal of one day teaching at Warren Central. We wish you continued success at college. It has been a fast 18 years, but we wouldn't change a thing. Always remember you have true friends and family for support any time you need us. The Rose
This land is barrren, it's parched and dry
Will anything grow or even multiply?
Then all at once to my surprise.
The heavens are opened and I see with my eyes
the land is blooming with colors galore
I fall to my knees, Lord, please show me more!
One flower stands alone, the rose beautiful supreme
This one was like nothing, I had ever seen.
I cried Lord, "You are the Rose of Sharon"
Then I realized, I had, had a glimpse of Heaven.
You spoke and you said
"My child you are my rose, I know each little petal and how it grows
The thorns are for a reason, you may not understand,
Just keep trusting in me and hold my hand,
For all I see is a "Beautiful Rose"
And truly, my child you are one of those!
With love,
Mom, Dad, & family

Lindsay Rae,
Not a day has gone by in the past 18 years that Mom and Dad haven't thanked God for the honor and privelege of raising you up. What a fun ride it has been. You've grown into an amazing young lady with such a giving spirit and loving soul. We couldn't be prouder of you. Congratulations on your graduation, Now - Reach for the stars, keep your happy heart, and always remmber your faith.
With all our love,
Mom, Dad, Lacey, & Corky

"If you want to see the rainbow you have to pass through the rain"

Traci,

Your senior year has had a lot of "rain". Your rainbow will soon be here. We are so very proud that you have grown from this and become such a beautiful daughter, sister, and aunt. We know that your future will be bright and you will have fond memories of growing up. That fantastic smile of yours will last forever in our hearts and eyes. Good luck in your future and remember WE LOVE YOU!!!

Mom, Dad, Tom, Rick, Andy, Kevin, Heather, & Kiki

Student Trainers

Thanks for your support!
From: Matt & Mr. Dilts

Brandon Watson

Brandon,

You have never been a moments trouble. You've grown from a good, happy baby to an independent, intelligent young man. With your faith in God, your drive, your good heart and your willingness to keep your dreams alive, the sky is the limit for you. I am so proud of you. Congratulations!

Love,
Mom

Eric Cook

Eric,

Finally you are a senior and will soon be graduating. We are so proud of you in how far you have come and in all your accomplishments. It is really hard to believe that our BABY is all grown up and will soon be going away to college. We will always be there to support you in any way that we can. Good luck in the future and thank you for being a WONDERFUL SON.

Samantha Anderson

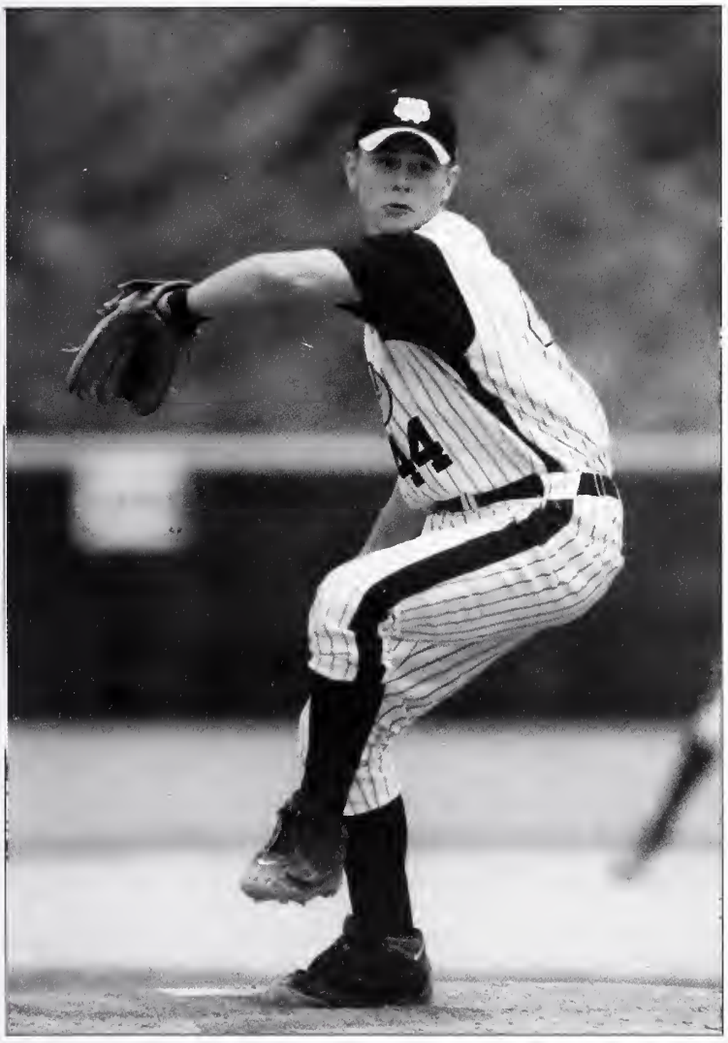
Samantha,

It seems like only yesterday you were our little "Booter" and you little brother's "Sissy", reminding him "Matthew don't eat the easter grass!" You have since grown into a beautiful, kind, and caring young lady, who couldn't make her parents more proud. We know you will excel in whatever you choose to do with your life. We will always be there to support you. We love you very much,

Mom, Dad, & Matthew

Chase Pandoli

1. Marry the right person. This one decision will determine 90% of your happiness.



2. Work at something you enjoy and that's worthy of your time and talent.
3. Give people more than they expect and do it cheerfully.
4. Become the most positive and enthusiastic person you know.
5. Be forgiving of yourself and others.
6. Be generous.
7. Have a grateful heart.
8. Persistence, persistence, persistence!
9. Discipline yourself to save money on even the most modest salary.
10. Treat everyone like you want to be treated.
11. Commit yourself to constant improvement.
12. Commit yourelf to quality.
13. Understand that happiness is not based on possessions, power or prestige, but on relationships with people you love and respect.
14. Be loyal.
15. Be honest.
16. Be decisive even if it means you'll sometimes be wrong.
17. Be a self-starter.
18. Stop blaming others, take responsibility for every area of you life.
19. Be bold and dangerous. When you look back on your life, you'll regret the things you didn't do more that the ones you did.
20. Take good care of things you love.
21. Don't do anything that wouldn't make your mother proud.

Congratualtions!
I love you so much,
Your mother

Senior Class

As you leave Warren Central, your paths will lead you to a world full of opportunities and careers. Using your technical,manual or personal skills, going to college or developing your creative and artistic talents are all possibilities. As children, you dreamed of becoming cowboys, nurses, or astronauts.

As you reached your teen years, your true interests and abilities began to materialize. as you go into adulthood, your dreams will begin to turn into reality. the future is now, and you are it. Take the opportunity and push the limits.

Thank you for sharing your senior year with me. I will miss your smiles and your enthusiasm. My world, both personally and professionally, has been enhanced because of the Class of 2004 has been a part of it.

Congratulations, lots of love, and luck to each of you.

Always in my heart,
Mrs. Widgren

Chelsea Schneider

It truly has been an honor watching you become the person you are today. We are so very proud of you. You have already accomplished so much.

Continue to make a difference in all you do. The best is yet to come.

With all our love,
Mom and Dad

Fallon Thomas

Fallon,

Scott McQuillen

Scott,

I know when I was carrying you that you were a special blessing sent to me.

Thank you for always being everything any mother could hope for. You are my pride and joy.

Love always,
Mom

To the Staff:

This has been such a wonderful year full of memories! All of you mean so much to me and have touched my heart in your own special ways! I appreciate everything that you have done to help get the book done. You are fabulous!

Stephen - I could never have asked for anyone else to be my one and only boy on staff. "Carrot Head, You otter get every sports award there is!"

J-Twins & Beautiful Lux- I am so glad that I have gotten the chance to get to know you so well this year! You three are beautiful people! KIT

Brandy- Everyone says that it all gets better as the years go by and with you as editor I'm sure that goes for next year's yearbook! Mickey- Please don't let Haaby make you cry too much next year! And always remember that you are a meaningful part of staff.

Jess C - Junior year would have been so boring without you. I love our conversations and I promise never to bring up that homecoming spread ever again!

Newspaper seniors- I could never do the things you do! I have always known that yearbook was definitely the one for me, but you guys have made me think about changing my mind. (Note: I thought about it. I would never do it!) I would not have made it through the year without Paul's hugs and advice, Chelsea's support and wisdom, Heather's pictures and laughter, Adam's style and charisma, and Brent's god-like powers! All of you will always be in my heart and when I'm old, crazy, and in a nursing home, I promise to be the lady that scoots around in her wheelchair just going to the newspaper room.

Lauren- We certainly have had our ups our downs. I will never forget our trips to Dallas and D.C., especially not our trip to BSU. As boring as it was, we shared so much, got to know each other so well, and became close friends. You are wonderful!

Haaby - We both started out this year new at this, but I think we have done a wonderful job. This book is absolutely everthing I had imagined from the beginning and so much more. Without you none of that would have been possible. You were always such an encouragment to pay attention to the little details and get the job done. Thank you for everything.

Finally, I have to give a shout out to the coolest people I know, my family. Thank you all for supporting me thru every adventure. Amy- I love you to death and consider you my sister! I never thought that I would find that friend that completes me and makes me exactly who I want to be, but I found her in you!

Well, what a year it has been! You are all the greatest! I will never forget a one of you! You have all made a tremendous impact on my life! No matter how big or small you are all so amazing, and I love every one of you!

As the oldest staff member, all of 3 years, I have seen you all grow from day one and I know that your future is very bright! Good luck and remember to have fun, but never forget that your life can change in an instant!

Krys- You are the best! Thank you for everything! We have become so close these past two years, you are one of my best friends! I love you and will miss you so much. I will never forget our journeys together! Washington D.C., Ball State, Franklin! What a trip!

Twins- What in the heck is there to say without crying? You two are so awesome! I love you both so much, you are like my little sisters and I will never forget the times that we have spent together! You can came up and stay with me at Ball State whenever you want; you are always welcome! Keep your heads up. Your parents did an awesome job raising the two of you! Remember that you can always trust each other. You are each others best friend no matter what. If you need anything just call I will ALWAYS be there for the two of you!

Sarah L.-You are the goofiest person that I know! Even though most of the time you are out of the loop you are still a sweetie! You too can come and see me whenever you want! Once you get your head in the game (j/k) you will be awesome! I love ya to death no matter how silly you may be!

Stephen-Well lets see, we have been through so much, rumors and all! You are a great guy and I will never forget you! Just remember that I'm not lion when I tell you that you otter never monkey around! You have my seal of approval to have a whale of a time next year. Remember to keep the frogs out of your throat!

Haab- Well I have known you for 4 years and what an impact you have had on me! I will never forget your jokes and yells! You are a great teacher! Thanks for everything!

Newspaper Seniors- Good luck! Have fun and live life to the fullest! You guys are great and will go far! Thanks for everything! Remember you have to try at everything you do, the harder the better!

To everyone- I love you all thanks for everything! You are truly the best of the best! Good luck, have fun, and remember to make every moment count! These years of high school go by so fast, I know, but you will never forget the people that you spend your high school years with, so make good friends and keep them 650 copies of the 67th volume of the Wigwam were printed by Herff Jones. Yearbooks at the cost of $50 for students. Mrs. Cathy Wines served as the Herff Jones representative. Mr Mark Haab served as yearbook advisor as well as Publications Director. Mr. Tony Burchett was the principal. The book was printed on 80 pound matte paper. All photos were taken by staff photographers or Prestige Portraits. All page layouts were created on Pagemaker 7.0 software. Headline fonts were Jessica and Optima, body copy was Goudy, and captions were Optima.
